

FIRST CONCRETE SHIP ARRIVES IN PORTLAND HARBOR

The Faith Ties Up at St. Johns Mills to Take on a Cargo of Lumber.

MANY WILL INSPECT VESSEL First Trip Proves Stone Ship a Success and Plans Are Made for Building Others.

To load lumber, the famous concrete steamer Faith, first large vessel ever built successfully of concrete, put into the Portland harbor this afternoon, diting at the mouth of the river and along the coast, as well as those at Vancouver.

Although concrete construction is not new, the Faith is a product not heretofore attempted, and therefore special interest attaches to her.
