

CAMP REJECTIONS OF DRAFTED MEN INCENSE BOARDS

Ten Per Cent of Oregon Draftees Recently Sent to Camp Lewis Are Called Physically Unfit. REJECTED PUT IN CLASS 5 Supply Grows Scarcer as Need Increases and Class 2 Must Be Invaded, It Is Declared.

Two hundred men, 10 per cent of those recently sent to Camp Lewis from Oregon, will be returned as physically unfit, if the present rate of rejections continues by the army examining physicians at Camp Lewis.

Local boards are incensed over the action taken by the camp physicians as they grow scarcer in number. Many of the boards have barely enough men left in class 1 to fill the quota called for July 22, and if they must draw from these alternatives for the men rejected from class 2 to fill out the July quota, although no provision has yet been made for taking men from this class.

Some of the causes given for rejection by the returned men are one-sixteenth of an inch too short, perforation in one ear and slightly under weight.

Never before has such a large percentage of draftees been rejected, and the board men declare that under the modified requirements issued by the provost marshal general the men should have been accepted. The modified regulations admit a draftee with ability to hear moderately well.

The returned men will be placed in class 5 for the period of the war, along with one-legged men, the morally unfit and the blind.

The charge has been made that the camp physicians have their eyes so closely fixed on the rules and regulations in force when they began work for the government that they have been unable to adapt themselves to changed conditions.
