How Father De Smet Pioneered In the Oregon Country

The pioneer of the Catholic missions n Eastern Oregon was P. J. De Smet. f the Society of Jesus, who came from Louis in 1841 to the Flatheads, or Kallspels. He made' no attempt change the nomadic customs of the Indians, and readily encouraged a belief among them that the presence of the "Black Gown" gave them invulnerability from their dreaded enemies, the Blackfeet. Father De Smet afterward went to Europe and obtained reinforcements consisting, besides priests, of a considerable nun f nuns, some of whom were dest for the St. Paul een recently es mission, which ! tablished on French prairie. The party arrived in August, 1844, in a Belgian brig, the Indefatigable, On reaching the bar of the Columbia, which had been greatly dreaded by all the voyagers the vessel slipped in through not hitherto known. Thus was the south When the vesse channel discovered. dropped anchor well within Point Adams is the mass singing of the men. No Better Fishing Than From Estacada to the Upper Clackamas

An unexcelled fishing trip of four or five days on foot or horseback is from Estacada to the upper waters of the Clackamas river. No one who has ever reached Oak Grove fork has complain of the fishing. Timothy meadow ishes good camping and is a fine place to loaf in. From Timothy meadow to Plaza the trail affords some wonderfu views of Mount Hood. On the way from Plaza to Estacada is some of the cenery of the journey. You climb over Sousy mountain. At one point you see a panorama overlooking the tremend gorges of Eagle creek and river, both tributaries of the Clackama Roaring river is another excellent trout stream and you will wonder if any country could be wilder. After you have climbed Squaw mountain the way will be easier, mostly down hill. For further information regard routes, rates, time schedules and of
