

KLICKITAT COUNTY WINS DISTINCTION WITH MEMORIAL

No Other Community Known to Have Erected Monument in Memory of Present War Heroes

SIX NAMES ARE INSCRIBED

Incident Marks Coupling of Modern Times With Ancient When Stories Recounted Sacrifices.

To Klickitat county Washington, attaches the distinction of being the first community in the Northwest, and so far as reported the first in America, to consecrate a memorial to its sons who have met death while in the nation's service in the existing war.

In taking the old Druid cromlech of Stonehenge as a model for the memorial set up at Maryhill there is a peculiar appropriateness, a joining of the present with the symbolism of the past, a reaching far back into the dawn of the human race when monuments of stone were first erected to commemorate some sacrifice.

There is also significance in the fact that the memorial was dedicated on the anniversary of the American Declaration of Independence. The place, the day, the symbolism of the monument and the words of the speakers all combined to arouse a patriotic fervor which found expression in the uprising of 500 residents of Klickitat county present at the consecration who said in the following resolution proposed by Samuel Hill:

Resolution Adopted
"On our country's natal day, it is right and fitting that we should give ourselves anew to support those principles which our government was formed to maintain. Our forefathers gave us the liberty we enjoy; that heritage now incites us to aid in conferring the same on others.

"While we consecrate this tablet to the memory of Klickitat's sons who have met the supreme test, who have given their lives and their all for our country, we must one and all pledge ourselves to retain, for those that are left behind, that liberty, free and untainted from Bolshevism, Non-Resistance, Communism, I. W. W.ism, Kaiserism and Prussianism, and to transmit to those who follow us the gift of democratic government, of the people, by the people, and for the people.

Six Names Inscribed

Six names have already been inscribed upon the monument, Dewey V. Bromley, John W. Cheshier, James B. Duncan, Robert F. Graham, Carl A. Lester and Robert F. Venable. Space has been left for others who are expected in the nature of things to follow. Of the six, "One sleeps in the land where rolls the Oregon," said Nelson B. Brooks, who had the chief dedication, "I am dead, three in the soil of the pine clad hills of Klickitat, one upon the blood stained fields of France and one who when the dawn gave up its dead from the tomb beneath the heather of Scotland."

The completion and care of the memorial will be in charge of the Klickitat County Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Association, of which the following are trustees: Samuel Hill, W. G. Collins, Charles H. Babcock, E. N. Hill and J. C. Potter.

LAD OF 14 ADMITS HE STARTED FOREST FIRE WHICH DID BIG DAMAGE

Albany, Or., July 6.—Roy Steingrandt, aged 14, of Foster, today pleaded guilty before juvenile court to setting a forest fire which caused thousands of dollars of damage and which burned over 400 acres, including much green timber. Steingrandt was arrested after remarks made by him aroused suspicions of neighbors.

He applied for a job as look-out on Buckley mountain, and is believed to have attempted to create a need for a look-out by starting fires. After the first fire was being fought, others were found which enlarged the blaze. The fire started June 17 and is still burning, but is under control.

Steingrandt denied being implicated in the affair until he became confused and crossed himself in his testimony. After conference with his father, he pleaded guilty and was paroled to his father, who promised to keep him out of the timber.

Many small forest fires are reported in Linn county, only one of which is out of control, and but little damage has been done. Fire near Fish lake, in the Santiam forest, broke out a few days ago and has not been put under control as yet, but this is not believed to be doing much damage as it is in an old burn.

U. S. GUARDS TAKE CHARGE OF VESSEL SUNK IN RIVER

words of 4-year-old Omar Aldenhauer when he was rescued. Tonight he had lost his smile and his heart was broken; his mother's body had been taken from the second deck.

Two young women did not wait for lifelines, but jumped and William, the swim ahawer. Scores of men were either picked up out of the river or swam to land.

The body of a woman with her hands clinging fast to a baby buggy was recovered from the second deck. It was impossible to pull the woman and the buggy through the hole in the hurricane deck at the same time, and her fingers were pried loose from their death grip, and the buggy with its dead removed later.

Captain Mehl and his wife, who were with the excursionists, worked alongside the rescuers.

Ordered to Share Too Late
"I am a pauper," Mehl said, "but I don't care about that. If this could have been avoided! Pretty tough—eh?"

Hot Tom Williams was at the wheel. According to Mehl and Williams, the vessel was moving on a slow bell when they felt her scraping the bottom of the river. Williams backed the Columbia off to the starboard and swung her nose down stream. Captain Mehl observed she was listing slightly.

VANCOUVER BARRACKS RECRUITS INTERESTED IN EVENING 'STUNTS'

Lieutenant Kiess Shows Personal Concern in Welfare of New Army Men.

Vancouver, Wash., July 6.—In the cantonment at the present time are 5000 of the happiest recruits that were ever brought together from various sections of the country. They are under the usual quarantine that is put on newly arrived recruits, and are thus deprived of their nightly jaunts down town, but they seem to be both happy and content, and the reason as given by one of them, Sergeant Jack O'Leary, and as attested by all who heard him say it, is that their commanding officer, Lieutenant Kiess, besides seeing that they get three square meals a day, has concerned himself with seeing that there are no dull moments for his men when they are off about.

This might sound like a pretty big task for an officer to undertake, and if he did not have his heart in the work and did not have a genuine brotherly love for every one of them, it would be with whom he comes in contact it could not be accomplished.

Just a word about Lieutenant Kiess then see how easily he has accomplished what he has undertaken. He is a native of the blues, and other morale destroyers from encroaching upon his part of the cantonment.

Lieutenant Kiess, and by the way he was one of several who received the rank of first lieutenant today, comes from Williamsport, Pennsylvania, and before joining the National army was a captain in the Pennsylvania National Guard. He has been in Vancouver Barracks since last January 11, and is now an officer in the Casual Receiving company. In seeing that the men are fed he is assisted by Sergeant Block, Jack O'Leary, and then assisted by the same men and others he sees that they are kept from getting lonesome during the long summer evenings.

Entertainment is a feature. An entertainment bureau has been established, and as fast as men with entertaining ability are found they are kept track of and in the evenings are called upon to provide their share of an impromptu program which takes place every evening at 8 o'clock on an outdoor platform. The government receives street road runs but a few yards from the barracks. There are given and each evening in addition to the hundreds of soldiers who gather to hear the program the road is lined with civilians who are attracted by the music and singing. Last evening about 2000 recruits were in the crowd which encircled the entertainers.

The program which is scheduled for Monday night is a simple of what can be done with the varied talent that is found in so large a gathering of men. Jack O'Leary, for many years on the "Red Cross" circuit, is in charge of the affair. "We are sure that the boys of the country, representing almost every line of endeavor, are and making the best of it; and, better than that, we like it!" he said as he assigned the names on the following program:

Program is Varied
Smith and Lewis, in an old-fashioned hoodlum; Ray Bargo, solo; E. J. Myers, solo; C. B. Weisman, solo; J. C. McPherson, solo; R. S. Lawrence, bass solo; Professor Boyd Sturges, will demonstrate physical culture, will demonstrate breathing exercises and show the men how to keep in good trim; L. K. Noe, an entertainer, will play the piano. At intervals during the program the mess boys' jazz band will entertain; J. O'Leary, manager of the affair, will sing some of his best songs; Private Lewis of Washington, D. C., monologist, will give some of his original impersonations.

The men are enthusiastic over the plans for the entertainment, and the hearing with a determination to make them of high order.

Perhaps the most enthusiastic person of all is the lieutenant whose idea it was to start the evening entertainments, and who is present at all of the gatherings. Although most of the men have been in the cantonment less than a week, and have never met before, they are getting acquainted, and a feeling of fellowship permeating the cantonment that banishes unhappy thoughts and inspires the men to do their best whatever their occupation may be, whether cooking, peeling spuds, washing dishes, or drilling.

SIGNAL CORPS MEET ON JULY FOURTH WAS ENTIRELY SUCCESSFUL

Lt. Col. Charles Van Way Planned Events, Assisted by Committee on Arrangements

Vancouver, Wash., July 6.—The military athletic carnival of the signal corps cantonment which took place July 4, was probably the most successful affair of its kind ever witnessed in the local barracks. The various events were planned under the direction of Lieutenant Colonel Charles Van Way, commanding officer of the signal corps cantonment. He was assisted by the following committee on arrangements: First Lieutenant Louis Dorn, chairman; First Lieutenant W. J. Jesse, First Lieutenant R. D. Newhall, Second Lieutenant T. J. Sheehy, Second Lieutenant T. F. Torley, Second Lieutenant F. A. Quayle, Second Lieutenant S. T. Halsted, Second Lieutenant S. Cleland, Second Lieutenant T. F. Burroughs, Second Lieutenant P. W. Houser. The lieutenant's idea is soon to give an entertainment for the benefit of the Red Cross, and it is his hope that every man in his section of the cantonment.

WOMEN ASKED TO DO MORE THAN KNIT AND BUY LIBERTY BONDS

Miss Lena M. Phillips Urges Business Women to Take Advantage of Opportunities.

A plea for a united national organization of business and professional women with a constructive program for helping to win the war through economic bigger and more far reaching measures than knitting and subscribing to government bonds, which were only an investment, was the message of Miss Lena Madison Phillips, an attorney of New York City, directing the work of the national program of war service for business and professional women, to an interested audience of about 200 persons in Library hall Saturday night.

"This is the crucial period for business women," declared Miss Phillips. "This is the time we must organize to gain those things we should have in the way of proper working conditions. If we do not take advantage of the greatest opportunity ever offered to us, after the war is over things will settle back in their old way and women will be 'held on the shelf high and dry.' The plan of war service that is being adopted in New York, according to Miss Phillips, is along the line of greater efficiency among the vast numbers of women now swarming into the business world. To train the new recruit into the right attitude toward her work and business life, Miss Phillips believes to be the great work of the business and professional women of today. To know how to dress properly, to not hold that transitory attitude common among girls who expect to marry within a year or so, and to be more efficient in their work—these things must be instilled into the mind of the newcomer, according to the New York attorney.

The working details of the plan consists in organizing the commercial groups into units and grading them according to certain standards, consisting of general efficiency, patriotic contributions, efficiency along more specified lines and appropriate dress. Each business firm would be given a service flag containing a bar for every 75 per cent of its employees qualifying in the four branches. Badges would be furnished to all employees, with a bar for each standard, so that when a woman had four bars upon her badge it would be an excellent recommendation.

An open discussion followed Miss Phillips' talk, as to the most feasible program to be adopted by the business and professional women in Portland.
