

REGISTRANTS ARE BEING SELECTED FOR FOUR CALLS

One for Camp Fremont, Second Spruce Division, Third Auto Mechanics, Fourth for Negroes

1918 BOYS ARE AMONG THEM

Difficulty Experienced in Securing Men to Fill Demands at Vancouver; No One Volunteers

Men are being selected by the local draft boards to fill four different calls within the next few weeks, one for enrollment to Camp Fremont, Cal., one for special or limited service in the spruce division at Vancouver, one for training in auto mechanics at the Modern Auto school at Spokane, and one for colored men at Camp Lewis.

A number of the registrants of the 1918 class are being called to the colors to fill out the Camp Fremont quota, as the board are permitted to select from them as soon as their supply of last year's registrants is exhausted.

Considerable difficulty is being experienced in getting men to fill the call for Vancouver, which is for doggers, buckers and other skilled workmen. Practically no men volunteered, and in finding men fitted for this particular kind of work the boards were taxed to their last resource.

51 Columbia County Young Men Inducted

St. Helena, Or., July 23.—Fifty-one of Columbia county's young men left Monday for Camp Lewis to be inducted into army service. The men arrived in St. Helena Sunday afternoon and were guests of Mayor Saxon. They were served supper by the ladies of the Red Cross and were guests at the homes of various citizens for the night. Automobile owners had their cars at the courthouse at 7:30 o'clock this morning and the boys were taken to the depot. Captain Mason called out his home guard to have a victory celebration and at the same time entertain the departing boys. Patriotic music and short talks by several prominent citizens made up the program. The city's principal streets were decorated with flags and bunting and strings of electric lights.

PROBLEM OF PLANE PRODUCTION SOLVED, THINKS COL. DISQUE

Flight in DeHaviland Scout Machine Convinces Officer of Perfection of Liberty Planes.

In the current monthly bulletin of the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen, Colonel Eric P. Disque of the spruce division, U. S. A., describes as follows an airplane flight in a DeHaviland scout machine, which he recently experienced at the Dayton-Wright field, Dayton, Ohio: "After equipping myself with the necessary clothing I was strapped into the observer's seat of the machine and soon started off with a pilot, Reinhardt as pilot, ascending to an elevation of some 10,000 feet.

"The machine, of course, was propelled by a Liberty motor, which generates something over 400 horsepower. We ascended at an exceedingly sharp angle, through two strata of clouds, making various turns and dives which aviators find necessary in order to meet conditions of the air.

"The speed of the machine was terrific, probably the greatest ever obtained by an airplane in this country or abroad, and the power of the motor was such that passing through denser air gave us practically no change in conditions, the only noticeable effect being a slight jar, which with a less powerful motor would have been a very severe jolt.

"The machine in which I traveled is of the type which is equipped with four machine guns, two of which are operated by the observer in the rear pit and are moved on universal arcs; the other two are fixed to the machine, to be operated by the pilot, and are electrically timed so that the bullets pass between the blades of the propeller, which makes 1600 revolutions per minute, the outer edge traveling over 10,000 feet per minute. Of course, when the pilot is firing his two guns, which fire simultaneously, he must direct his machine toward the target in order to aim the guns. This machine is also equipped with electrical heating devices which are attached to the aviator's clothing in order to keep them warm in extreme elevations, electric lights, head and tail, and wireless apparatus. It carries 10 bombs which are released by the pilot or observer at will and has a complete photographic attachment for taking any number of pictures. Probably the total cost of the machine, with all its delicate equipment, is in the neighborhood of $20,000. Among the apparatus which is found upon the dash are: A speedometer which indicates the speed of the machine, through air pressure; a barometer which accurately indicates the elevation, rise and fall of the machine; a thermometer; a compass; a level indicator, both horizontal and vertical, which indicates the angle of rise and fall and position of the machine; also several other intricate instruments which are not possible of description in an article like this.

"The ease with which the motor handled this large airplane, weighing something over 3500 pounds and the rapidity with which it traveled and rose to its height convinced me that we have solved, beyond doubt, the problem of producing planes of this type. After we had landed and I left the machine I felt confident that it was a matter of producing such machines in vast quantities in order to secure such supremacy over our enemies as will assure a prompt termination of the war. I am confident that it was a matter of road to such production, but that it will continue to be the most difficult problem that the American people have ever had to face, and it will require long and hard work on the part of everybody to produce the essential parts of these machines before we can provide them in such numbers as to completely overwhelm the German armies."
