DE GOUTTE ADMIRES YANKS

French Commander Asks That His Admirer for Americans Be Sent to United States.

By Newton C. Parks

With the American Army at the Aisne, July 31.—(6 P. M.)—The battle of the Marne has entered a new phase in which the Germans may be expected henceforth to contest bitterly every effort of the allies to advance towards the Fismes lines.

Consequently the American public must not expect the same rapid progress in the next fortnight which marked the last two weeks of fighting.

This impression was gained this afternoon in a talk with General De Goutte, brilliant commander of the Sixth French army corps, in the sector north of the Marne, where the Germans were thrown back across the Ourcq.

Are Under General De Goutte

A large number of Americans were engaged in the Marne, adjacent to the general headquarters of the command. The general's headquarters are in an old chateau from which he has been directing operations. The furnishings of the general's headquarters are simple, consisting of a table and two chairs, together with several maps, including one large relief map in colors showing the sector in which Americans under his command are operating.

The general seated himself in a wooden chair and with a ruler showed on the relief map how the Germans had been success in an effort to retreat from the pocket. Then he pointed out the location towards which we are now advancing north of the Ourcq, explaining how the wooded heights gave the Germans a magnificent line of defense by the aid of their machine guns. The Boche is not likely to retire from these positions without a severe struggle, the general indicated.

Savage Attacks Indefatigable

General De Goutte further pointed out that the savage German counter attacks against Serignes and Serzy were evidence that the enemy is now preparing to make a stand.

One of the correspondents present asked if the allies would continue to advance to the Fismes line.

The general smiled as he replied that this depended on what the Germans planned. Further he did not care to answer.

Another French officer remarked afterward:

General De Goutte is not the kind who skins a bear before he kills it.

Admires Yankee Spirits

General De Goutte said it was an unexpected pleasure to find a number of American officers with whom he had cooperated in China now working with him in this fight.

He considered it a great honor to command the first large force of Americans in their first big engagement.

In conclusion, the French commander asked that word of his admiration for the way our men are fighting be sent to America. At the same time he announced that one of our regiments fighting on the left of his sector had been cited in a French divisional order the other day. This regiment is from one of our newly arrived units.

your bravery. I, and with me the entire fatherland, am certain of this.

"The American Army's numerical superiority does not frighten us. It is spirit which brings decision, as well as the course the campaign has hitherto taken. Despite the efforts of the world's greatest naval powers, our U-boats, sure of success, are attacking the vital forces which are streaming across the sea to the aid of our enemies. We must and shall continue to fight until the enemy's will to destruction is broken. We will make every sacrifice to attain that end."

End of British Fleet Predicted

Amsterdam, Aug. 1.—(U. S.)—The destruction of the British fleet by German U-boats "is the sensational prediction made by Admiral von Holtzendorff, chief of the German naval staff, in a dispatch from Berlin today.

The German admiral's prediction followed an admission that German submarines were unable to sink American transports and "consequently were being employed only against cargo carriers."

All Available Called Out

The Hague, Aug. 1.—(U. P.)—Germany is calling up every man that can be spared, according to information obtained from that country through various sources. Of 200,000 employees at Krupp's, between 80,000 and 40,000 are said to have been called to the colors, a dispatch from Berlin today.

"Foch's 'break through' theory has not yet been realized," the Tageblatt says. "One is justified in speaking of German success."

Munition Makers Blamed

Basle, Aug. 1.—(U. S.)—In a violent attack in the Berliner Tageblatt, Theodore Wolff, editor of the paper, charges the Pan-German munition makers with prolonging the war.

"They considered America's entry into the war and joyously welcomed it because it called for an increase of munitions, but at the same time it permits the entente to continue," said Wolff. "They are now asking how the war can be stopped, but at the same time are continuing their own propaganda."

Von Falkenhause Summoned

The Hague, Aug. 1.—(U. S.)—General von Falkenhause has been summoned to great headquarters for a conference with the Kaiser, giving rise to the report that he will succeed Field Marshal von Eichhorn as German commander in Ukraine.

General Frederick K. von Falkenhause is the present German military governor of Belgium.

CAPTAIN OF BRITISH ARMY COMPLETES HIS WORK IN PORTLAND

T. Templer-Powell Will Leave Here Tonight After Assisting in War Work.

Captain T. Templer-Powell of the Lancashire Fusiliers has completed a work in which he has been successfully engaged in the Northwest for several months of presenting to men in war industries the essential nature of their work to soldiers over-seas. He will leave Portland tonight. When he came he represented the War Savings Stamp campaign and showed how subscriptions to Uncle Sam's "baby bonds" would help finance the war. Lately he has been speaking to the men in the shipyards under the auspices of the Emergency Fleet corporation.

Captain Powell has back of him an heroic record as a fighting man. He went to France from London in January, 1915, and was made a captain on the field before the end of that month. He fought first in LeTouquet, Belgium, later at Ypres and was gassed in the first attack of the Germans before the English troops had gas masks. After his recovery in late 1915 he got back to France and Ypres, where he was wounded and suffered shell shock in March, 1916. He was sent to the Somme front and was in the battles of Thiepval, Beaumont and Courcellette, part of the time being attached to the Canadian staff as divisional liaison officer. After the capture of the Esch and before he returned to action went through the commanding officers' course at Aldershot for command of a battalion in the field.

Soon after return to the front he leaped into a trench during a charge and suffered a broken ankle. During his convalescence he has been telling his war story.

With the removal of the limit of 25 men a week in the regular navy, and the extension of the age limit in the reserves from 35 to 40, it is expected August will show a marked increase over previous months, unless local boards should refuse to grant releases to men of draft age.
