CANADA TO BE IN NEED OF FARMERS WHEN WARS OVER

Rearrangement of Affairs When Soldiers Come Home One of Most Serious Problems.

IMMIGRANTS ALSO COMING

Additional Task Is to Find Way to Provide for Those Who Will Not Enter Agriculture.

By Colonel J. S. Dennis of the Canadian Army.

One of the most serious problems which Canada must face at the close of the war is the re-arrangement of our affairs upon the basis of normal civil life, with the incidental question of labor unemployment.

Labor conditions in Canada today are, in many respects, very similar to those which prevailed in the United States during their Civil war and the reconstruction period. Our labor conditions immediately previous to the war had the same chaotic aspect. The start of the war first brought depression in industry, followed by a rapid return in the demand for labor as manufacture of munitions and other war supplies extended, and today in Canada there is little if any unemployment, and skilled labor is in strong demand.

At the close of the Civil war the United States had a population of about 32,000,000. The Union army at the time of Lee's surrender numbered slightly more than 1,000,000. It was estimated that another million men and women were employed in the northern states in the manufacture of munitions. During the four year period of the Civil war immigration had fallen off, and recruiting had depleted the workers on the farms, and drawn largely from the laboring classes in the cities. The laborer, munition worker was supplied from other branches of industry, with the result that ordinary enterprises were compelled to run short-handed or pay a high premium for labor.

Compared With War

Compared with this situation we find Canada's army of about 400,000 drawn from a population of about 8,000,000. It is estimated that some 200,000 men and women are now engaged in munition work. Only 12 per cent of our army, however, has been enlisted from the farms and more than half of the total has been recruited from among the skilled and manual laborers. The comparison shows the same situation regarding the scarcity of labor for ordinary enterprises, because of the drain through the army for overseas forces and munition workers.

During the Civil war period wages gradually increased. Prices of commodities also advanced. The laborer, however, ever, skilled and unskilled, was placed at a disadvantage because his wages did not advance in proportion to the price of necessities. Even with this situation conditions were better among the mechanics and trades than among the slight and unskilled people, whose income did not advance in proportion to the increased price of living.

When the Union army started to muster out in 1865 at the rate of about 300,000 per month for the three summer months there was for a time a glut of the labor market. This was but temporary, however, as 1866 witnessed an active industrial and agricultural revival. The returning soldiers, a large percentage of whom had volunteered from the farming districts, went back to production or migrated to the homestead lands in the newly opened Mississippi Valley states. This which homesteading brought demands for new railroads; more than 15,000 miles of rails were laid in the West during the five years directly following the war. This railway work took up quantities of labor from the Eastern centers and assisted to a marked degree the settlers who had gone into the new country without sufficient funds to tide them through the breaking and growing seasons of the first years.

Need For Farmers

A general survey of the labor situation in Canada, indicates that about 150,000 more men will be required after the war than are now employed in Canada. This would about take care of the proportion of returning soldiers which will require employment after the war. The problem then arises as to what we will do with our munition workers—an estimated total of about 200,000 being employed in this work at present, fully 75 per cent of which number will be called upon to find other employment when the war is over.

We will also have the problem of finding employment for those immigrants seeking work, because it will be difficult to restrict immigration to those who wish to engage in agriculture. Our greatest need today is for more and more greater agricultural production. It is readily recognized from the fact that our population is half urban and we consume more than we produce. There will be great opportunity and need for farmers and farm laborers all through Canada after the war, but unless a proper governmental plan is worked out to direct our immigration into that channel, we face the danger of a flood of unemployed in our cities and towns, while our farms remain undeveloped.

Fake Seaman's Shoes Caused His Undoing

New York, Aug. 3.—(L. N. S.)—The "work of right" edict has resulted in many alibis, both pathetic and humorous, but one of the more recent ones is that of a young man who stole a uniform of a United States seaman and boarded an "R" to collect money for the "benefit of wounded seamen."
 The "seaman" had collected nearly a boxful of silver when he met Edward Smith, a gunner's mate, U. S. N., attending at the gunners' school at Washington. Smith was skeptical but became positive when he looked at the "seaman's" shoes. They were tan!

The "seaman" was in the midst of describing how "he made direct hits" while in the navy, when Smith trained two "bunches of fives" on him and let go. Smith showed how to give both direct and indirect hits, blacked and closed both of the impostor's eyes, split his nose, cut his lips and tore his uniform from stem to stern.
 The impostor showed good footwork and escaped. He left the box of money, which was turned over to the Red Cross.
