CHANGE IN COMMISSION WOULD BE BIG BENEFIT TO NATIONAL PASTIME

Neutral Chairman Would Do Much to Bring Public Back to First Love-After Needed Renovation the Game Bids Fair to Be Better Than Ever.

TEW YORK, Aug. 6.—(I. N. S.)—Baseball will come back ing the times of 2:02% and 2:02% in stronger and better than ever after the war is over, if the powers that be take advantage of the opportunity that is cuit racing season at the North Rancoming to them to rehabilitate the game.

War has hit baseball a solid smash, rocking it from stem to in 1915. stern, causing heavy financial losses to the club owners and resulting in a certain falling off of interest on the part of the public. Baseball needs renovating. There is no denying the fact that the administrative end of the game has reached the point where a reinforced foundation is imperative.

Ban Johnson recently remarked that a cessation of the game would give the magnates a chance to turn their attention to the supplied out of publical problems that have been held as the fact that the same and supplied out of publical problems that have been held as the fact that the same and supplied out of publical problems that have been held as the fact that the same and supplied out of publications are supplied out of publications and supplied out of publications are supplied out of publications and supplied out of publications are supplied out of publications.

American Demands Change The American league demands it, and some of the more conservative National league club owners realize that it is an eventuality that cannot be dedged, and admit as much. The high tribunal of baseball, with two National league representatives in its makeup, was a fine thing for the old league. The American league has a capable battler on the commission in the person of Ban Johnson, but two votes against Han's one gave the Nationals the adge, and the recent clash over the case of Scott Perry shows that all was not serene in the ranks of the "commish." What the commission needs is the presidents of the two leagues and a third and disinterested party to act as chairman. Carry Herrmann has been a capable chairman, yet Garry is a National league club owner. The third person must be a man thoroughly versed in baseball from every angle and disinterested altogether in a financial way with either major league. The minor leagues, too, should be represented.

Neutral Chairman Needed They should at least be reperesented by the neutral chairman of the commission, if not permitted to have a representative of their own choosing to sit with the commission in cases where minor league clubs are

Another thing that is bound to come in for attention in the major og is the expense of running the game. The farst thing every club owner will attempt, when the war is ver, will be to recuperate his losses. He will grab a big ax and start chopping away at the payroll, and he will be able to get away with it by the time a new crop of players is ready to step into the shoes of the highsalaried stars of the present, many of whom will pass along within a short time.

Fair Salaries to Be Paid Fair salaries for the players must be paid always, for they are the lads who keep the game alive. Yet the magnates brought about abnormal salaries themselves by reckless bidding for a player's services in the days when the game was at its height, and the player soon learned how to take advantage of the rivalry between club owners.

After the war, baseball, to be highly successful within a reasonably short length of time, must come back thoroughly renovated, with new policies in force and something more stable in the way of business methods. And the minor leagues-the sources of supply-must be better
