Economy in Use of Tin, Glass, Paper Urged at Conference

Conservation of tin, glass and paper through the substitution of other materials as containers and dispensing with all unnecessary wrappers is being considered at a series of conferences held in Washington between representatives of various industries and the food administration, according to a bulletin received at the local food administration office. The general policy is to eliminate all waste of labor or material, to use other containers than tin, where possible; to do away with certain small and odd-size containers and to give up all useless wrappers. It is estimated economy in these lines would save many millions. The world's tin supply is about stationary, the shortage of shipping making its transportation difficult from the remote mining regions, and the demand for the articles are making great inroads upon the tin and steel supply. Public Sale of Property Public sale of property against which are delinquent assessments for street and sewer work was held by the city at the courthouse Monday, the sale being the sixth of the series planned. Up to date the city has bought in to the extent of $200,000, the policy of the administration being to make all purchases which are rejected by private persons. At the sale on September 19 the city's share of the purchases was $22,481. Numbers of property owners redeemed their land prior to the sales.

Transporting of Shipworkers Will Be Closely Studied

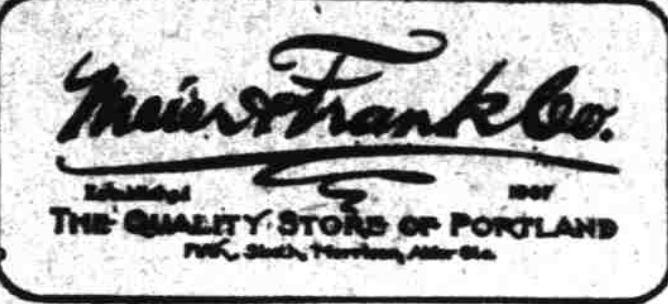

Edward A. West, in charge of passenger transportation facilities for shipworkers of the Emergency Fleet corporation on the Coast, arrived in Portland yesterday morning and is in conference with Lloyd J. Wentworth, supervisor of wood ship construction in this district, regarding the Portland situation. Mr. West, when in the city a few days ago, made several recommendations and suggestions and will go over the situation thoroughly during his present visit. For campers, a Californian has invented a convertible washstand that folds flat for carrying.
