Snapper Finds His Friend

POOR Snapper, he thought he had lost his little companions, or that he was losing his mind. For he could not see the hair of Teddy Possum, Jimmie Coon or Peter Rabbit anywhere.

Now Chatterbox knows all the new words and he often studies the dictionary with an old Mr. Owl. And then, too, he knows some words that are not in the dictionary, for he runs around and hears all the new words. He loves to show off, and all the Coon family love new words and love to use them.

"Well," said Chatterbox, "I will tell you just what it is; it is a long word to learn, but it is 'camouflage.' That's a French word. Teddy Possum, knows all about it, as he was almost the first to act it out—he and his family; they are always 'playing Possum.' Come here, Teddy Possum, and own up to your tricks."

Very near by, Teddy Possum was lying near a piece of driftwood and he was so still and his fur coat looked like driftwood and sand, with the sunlight on his soft fur.

Up jumped Teddy Possum and he looked at the word, but he didn't know what it was. Come on, Jimmie and Peter, and they were both hiding in the same way and no one would have seen them, certainly not stupid, slow Uncle Tim Turtle.

Teddy Possum said, "That's nothing, Snapper; my family is one of the oldest in the whole world and that is one of our best tricks, and soon all the others copied us. Now look at little Peter. He looks like a little piece of driftwood, and the white tip of his tail like a little seafoam."

"Come out, Jimmie Coon, and tell Snapper about that word," said the minute Jimmie appeared, and he thought it a good joke on Snapper that they all could hide under his very nose.

"I was near the window and little William was talking and his father was, too, and his father said, 'Camouflage,' surgery, since it restores confidence, teaches patience and ingenuity and encourages the patient to further effort."

is the word you want to use, little William; and there is nothing new about that word, or what it means, for all the animals have been doing it forever and ever."

"Wasn't that a smart thing for that man to say?" said Teddy Possum. "For, who would have thought they would learn from us?"

All this time Snapper was scraping sand away from the pantry door, and now he opened it, and Oh! Joy; there were 36 lovely fresh eggs, and every one had all the eggs they could eat, and that word, "Camouflage," was written on their fur coats. Only little Peter sat on one side of the pantry door (it was the outside) and he sighed, and he didn't dare say a word, but he thought: "Those pigs have eaten up all the eggs and then isn't one to take home to my dear Mother for Sponge cake!"

Eyestrain is responsible for many headaches. You may not suspect your eyes at all, but the strain upon them will manifest itself by headaches, dizziness and perhaps nervous irritability.
