Sam Broaddus, representing the Weyhl-Zuckerman company of California, sending the first supplies of the season to the Stockton, Cal., branch of the company. Growers are not yet offering their supplies freely, because many of them have been delayed in their digging operations because of the general lack of farm help.

Hyman H. Cohen Corn and Oats in Downward Trend

By Joseph F. Pritchard

Chicago, Nov. 19.—(L. N. S.)—Following the big price gains on corn on Saturday and yesterday, there were further advances of 1 % @ 30 today. While oats were strong at 1 % c higher, the buying power was not as urgent as that shown by corn. Provisions showed small rain.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—(I, N. S.)—The grains which maintained a high, strong trend yesterday, were lower at the opening of trade today. Corn dropped a cent in the November delivery, with many buyers of yesterday on the selling side. Offerings in all deliveries were greater than the trade comfortably absorbed, and during the early hours of trading the undertone was weak. Oats followed the corn to a lower level, frac ionally, with commission merchants largely of he selling side. Longs were active in an elect to unload, and the trend was downward. Provisions were lower, with trade light.
