Cable advises confirm a decrease in wheat sowings in New South Wales, the government reckoning a reduction of 16 ½ per cent, but our correspondent thinks it will be nearer 25

The latter reduction would mean a loss for that state of 900,000 acres, but on the other hand recent crop reports from other the other hand recent crop reports from other states have been favorable. With such large quantities of wheat remaining on hand a reduction of even 25 per cent for New South Wales would not be very serious. The coming crop of the whole commonwealth is estimated at 100,000,000 bushels of wheat which would at 100,000,000 bushels of wheat which would give 70,000,000 bushels for export. Adding this surplus to old erop remaining leaves 266,000,000 bushels available for export.

Norway—Large areas of new land have been tilled with the view of giving the country as much grain as possible. It is stated that 2,000,000 acres have been tilled this very which is somewhat less, however, than expected.
