Music and Fun On Bill at Orpheum

"The Only Girl" in Tabloid Delights Capacity Audiences on Sunday.

object which the world has nations.—President Wilson.

SEVEN, live wire acts and an excep-tionally interesting Orpheum screen news satisfied two capacity audiences at the Orpheum Sunday.

As there can be but one headline act. Martin Beck named "The Only Girl" for his headliner, although if any delay might cause the non-appearance of the troupe playing "The Only Girl," any of the other acts might well take the role, for all are of headline dalibre.

"The Only Girl," featuring Frank Harrington, is a cut down version o the two season's gago popular road show, "The Only Girl," by Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert, a musical farce. It is well played and sung in Orpheum form. Jim and Marian Harkins in "They Talk About Their Neighbors," drew continual applause. From an overgrown, bashful boy, whose arms and legs are more a hindrance than a help. Jim finally gets "brave" and reveals some interesting secrets of life behind the scenes. Elsa Ruegger, one of the world's greatest cellists, holds her audience airly entranced by her wonderful playing. Appearing with Miss Ruegger is Grace Marcia Lewis, soprano, whose singing is above the average. Jennings and Mack in their comedy ekit, "The Camouflage Taxi," are a continuous round of fun. Frank Brown keeps the whole audience swinging their shoulders and shuffling their feet with his jazzy xylophone playing of "Smiles" and "I'm Sorry I Made You Cry."

Marguerite Farrell is a headliner in "The 'Kelly' Girl." She appears in national costumes, and in her quaint manner sings old and new songs. Will Ferry in his own creation, "The Frog," is an unusual contortionist.

The Orpheum orchestra is popular

"Fighting Blood," at the Strand is, as may be gleaned from the title, a scrappy sort of film. The presence of William Farnum is another guarantee of action. So naturally the thing the fans applaud are several big fist fights. One is particularly thrilling, with Big Bill pitted against Willard Louis in a combat which does not end until Louis is ready for the hospital-at least that's the way it appears on the screen.

Farnum is a fighting parson in his Fox picture. He has so much fighting blood in him that he rebels at turning the other cheek, as the Bible admonishes, and when fair words fall, fair blows prove effective. So he goes through the western saloons and dance halls like a destroying angel, and commands respect and silence even if he doesn't do much religious converting.

Willy Karbe, upside down marvel, the vandeville star of the new bill Hughes and La Rado are bag-punchers and contortionists who attract more than ordinary attention, while the Roys, a peppery colored team, have an attractive repertoire of song, dance and As a special attraction Sanday, Mme. Frimini, the mind-reading marvel, was as scarce as 3-Star-Hennessey at a bootbrought back for one day.

Bed Time Tales : 1 "Officer 666"

A Boy Trapper Comes to Beavertown THERE was a camp of lumbermen in the Great Forest not far from Mirror Pond. A Country Boy said to the men one day, "I've brought my trap with me and I'm going to make some money catching those Beavers at Mirror

The men asked, "How much can you sell their skins for?" And the Country Boy answered, "Oh, I can sell each Beaver skin for about $2 apiece, My! I'll make a lot of money this fall, for the Beavers over there are as thick as blackbegries." And the Country Boy clapped his hands in glee, and whistled as he danced, reckoning that he would make a pile of money in trapping. Right after supper, that very ing, the Country Boy started off for Mirror Pond with his steel trap, and he had visions of making lots and lots of money by catching all the Beavers brown fur suits, to be made into garments for people who have money to buy such handsome furs. When the Country Boy reached Mir ror Pond, the red sun was just setting

Stock Players Add New Laurels to Their Ability in Presentation.

ONE of our old melodramic farce friends, "Officer 666," added new laurels to the playing ability of the Alcazar Players Sunday at its initial showing for the week. An aristocratic thief, with a craving for the possession of works of art, a bored American, who has had the weight of an inheritance of millions cast upon his shoulders when quite young. "Officer 666" and the girl, principal characters in the comedy, all get mixed and stirred into a conglomeration of mirthful circumstances, when the young millionaire, Travers Gladwin, the role taken by Edward Everett Horton, returns unexpectedly to his home from abroad. Characters presented gave a wider range of action in which the Alcazar Players may portray their ability than any other play presented this season. The scenes call forth quick action thought and thorough precision of detail, which was accomplished smoothly. Alice Fleming, cast as Helen Burton, does herself proud in the role of the heroine.
