"I Am in the Hands of My People," He Says in Commenting the community.

on Events of the Day.

(This interview was obtained Tuesday. Since then the former king of Portugal is reported to have returned to Lisbon, but official confirmation is lacking.)

By Robert Welles Bitchie London, Jan. 23 .- "I am in the hands of my people. If they wish me to rule again over them, I am waiting their

This simple statement was made to me Tuesday by Don Manuel Braganza in an interview.

The man who stands in the shadow of a shaky throne of ancient Portugal did not intend to grant an interview ; he had successfully evaded others at his spartments in the Claridge's hotel. But he hadn't counted on American methods Swedish of circumventing reluctance. He smilingly threw up his hands in token of surrender. "I have not received any information whatsoever from Portugal," he quickly interposed, answering my first question. "I know only what I have read in the papers. Communication with Portugal is very slow and uncertain, but I believe my supporters have won the day and I expect confirmation of the news tomorrow."

Wife Stately and Regal Manuel is a young man who has been waiting since 1910 for somebody to dust off his old family throne and put out the doormat with "Welcome." He seemed restive under the interview. He was clad in a very proper dinner coat with moonstone buttons, had a flower in his from Sweden. Resentment flares up in lapel and his hands were gloved. Anyone would mistake this ex-king party. for a London "exquisite" about to lead his lady to dinner. As a matter of fact that was what Don Manuel was doing. His ,wife, stately and regal, with imperious brow, impatiently tapped a slippered foot a short distance away, regarding the American interloper with dagger looks. "Were you cognizant beforehand of this attempt to reseat you?" asked the a flavor of insult in the fact that interviewer. "Absolutely not." Don Manuel answered without hesitation. "While my war enjoy certainly a formal but a sigcountry was at war, my word to mon- nificant precedence." country was at war, my word to mon-archist supporters was for unified ac-tion and will of all countrymen, and for a unified country against the enemy. The present situation abso-lutely does not arise from any instiga-tion and will of all countrymen, and for a unified country against the enemy. The present situation abso-lutely does not arise from any instiga-tion and will of the present situation abso-tion and will of all countrymen, and for a unified country against the enemy. The present situation abso-lutely does not arise from any instiga-tion and will of the present situation abso-tion and will t tion by me. If Portugal needs me and that no reply was made to the offer of McKENZIE-To Mr. and Mrs. A. O. McKenzie, a monarchical government can restore orde not existing since the republican reservernment came into power, then I am ready to do my duty. I may say in all sincerity that the mere thought of intrigue and revolt making has been repugnant to me.
