tor of The Journal-In a letter in The Journal of January 11 "One Who Didn't Get to Go" seems to think it a hardship that the soldiers who were sent overseas should be given preference in employment over those in uniform who were as anxious to go and do their parts at the points of danger and credit, but so sincere and conservative that seems worthy of notice. Those accepted for enlistment or draft and sent to the camps passed a rigid lent physical condition. More than that, they have had most unusual advantages training of body and mind which the better fits them for life in general and for immediate hustling for jobs. Thousands of those overseas, if at or near the front, and though not serious-wounded, underwent experiences which will leave long lasting, perhaps life lasting conditions of body or mind, perhaps both, from which those who didn't get to go will be grateful they are free. There are thousands of others who because of some slight "physical defect," or because they were a few years, or perhaps many years too old. were not permitted to go even to the training camps. But they also were just as anxious to go; and thousands of us have lived on "short rations" and worked and denied ourselves in hundreds of ways the world will never result of war. In the course of time those at the head of adjustment of affairs, and others as well, will learn that help belongs not to any one class nor because of any one circumstance, but because of needs and merits. In the meantime let us all be patient, and if we can't be patient then be as patient as we can. EARNEST WHILE.
