Brown, who spoke to members of the West Coast Lumbermen's association at a luncheon in the Portland hotel Saturday noon.

Mr. Brown has just returned from abroad, after several months spent in investigating the lumber needs and trade methods of Southern Europe and Northern Africa. He was one of four trade commissioners appointed jointly by the United States government and the lumber interests to examine opportunities for export trade

In order of their importance to the American lumber trade, Mr. Brown named the following countries as profitable fields for exploitation: Italy, Spain, France, the Balkan states, Morrocco and other French and Italian possessions in Africa. Needs of the lumber market in these countries are based upon normal pre-war importations, four years of non-construction during the war, work in reconstructing devastated areas and destruction of forests upon which they formerly depended for their Shipments of West Coast lumber prod ucts for war purposes have found their way into practically all of the allied countries, according to Mr. Brown, and have produced a most favorable impression. A trainload of Douglas fir and early today, when a Crowley barge, airplane spruce shipped to Milan, Italy, attracted more attention than a circus Thousands of men examined this product and compared it with the lumber products of the Italian markets. Similar interest was excited wherever shipments of Northwest lumber appeared in Europe, he says.

tem of measurement from feet and inches to the metric system, according to Mr. Brown. The bulk of the lumber importations into Europe prior to the passengers and general war were handled through British firms. he says, and purchasers are familiar with the English measurements. Most of the lumber imported is marketed on the cubic foot basis. Large sizes are in demand and these are cut to a variety of sizes and dimensions to suit local market conditions. An attempt to meet all the purely local requirements of the South European market by cutting to size in American mills would result in confusion and needless ex-

While practically all of the buildings in countries bordering on the Mediterranean are of stone or concrete construction with tile roofs, there is a vast amount of lumber used in flooring and framework. women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitrophosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.
