CIVIL WAR SOLDIER WAS ALSO A SAILOR

Charles Duggan

Among the "first to fight," and a fighter on land and sea—yet, Charles Duggan, who lives on Williams avenue, was not a marine.

When he offered his service to Uncle Sam he chose the infantry, served therein many months, then enlisted in the navy. Shades of the war department! When could doughboy wish a fondness for briny forsake his O. D. puttees for baggy pants of blue?

He was on one of the ships at the Wilmington blockade. Mr. Duggan, 78 years old, is an active member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and with Denny Lane, is proprietor of the Shamrock grocery on Williams avenue.

Are You Doing Your Duty? You Owe an Obligation. Are You Paying the Debt? Civil laws do not force you to pay this one. The law of health does. Are you going to lose the greatest asset to your welfare? Are you going to cast aside that which no man or agent can restore! Do not play with the fire of neglect, and forget your teeth. Be a philosopher for once and act upon the decision of the medical and thinking world—who say we cannot have good health and bad teeth. Do not try to persuade yourself that you are unable to have dental work: You cannot afford not to have it. Fear of being hurt is no longer the barrier. Ask yourself the question, and be honest with the answer: "Why am I delaying?" when I can have teeth filled, nerves taken out, crowns put on, the very worst teeth taken out, WITHOUT PAIN! Pride, health, and personal appearance are calling upon you to "clean-up" that mouth. At least, put same in a sanitary condition. You would not wear a black mark or permit a soiled spot to remain on the outside of your face—then why permit such on the inside? The individual with good teeth says the world is alright and there are many more pleasures than sorrows. Much more to live for than to die to be relieved of, etc. If you are not seeing life in this spirit you would do well to look for a cause—it may be your teeth. WE OFFER A FEW SUGGESTIONS: Take a mirror and examine your teeth and gums—see if your gums are pink and hard. Note the white or dark spots on the enamel. Test your breath by opening your mouth wide and exhale deeply and slowly with your hand close to your mouth. Your friends want to tell you, but are afraid. Have us X-Ray your mouth which will locate any hidden pus pockets. We will look them over for you gladly without charge and give you advice.
