Line Parties Are Planned For Concert

Multnomah Club Ball and French Army Band at Auditorium Will Divide Honors.

By Helen H. Hutchison
THIS evening Portland will divide its attention between the Multnomah club informal ball and the French army band who will appear at The Auditorium. A number of line parties have been planned for the concert of the soldier musicians, whose horizon blue uni-forms have been the chief object of interest about the streets of the city today. It has been a matter of comment all along the route of the band that foleach formal reception the members of the band have devoted their few hours of leisure to exploring the American shops, where they have acquired enough souvenirs to set up a shop of their own, including bits of finery destined to please the feminine eye, toys trinkets of novel design and strangest of all, lemon squeezers of every conceivable pattern.

A reception was held for the French musicians in the green room of the Chamber of Commerce this afternoon following the luncheon at the Hotel Benson for which the Progressive Busines Men's club were hosts. Charles Marias, president of the Franco-Belge society, gave an address of welcome in French and was chairman of arrangements for the reception. He was assisted by J. Drouillat, Professor H. Quoidbach, Edward Inhaus and L. Sonnerer, Mesdames Lenoir, S. Beatty, Louise Williams and Mile, A. Maillet.

The members of the band were met at the train by the girls of the motor corps of the National League for Women's Service, who assisted as chauffeurs for the musicians during the day

Honoring Miss Irene Gansneder on the occasion of her twentieth birthday, a delightful dancing party was given at her home Tuesday evening. Miss Gansneder was surprised by the arrival of her friends on returning to her home from a dinner party given for her earlier in the evening. The reception and living rooms were prettily decorated with iaffodils, narcissus and pussy-willows, while shamrocks played a very prominent part in the color scheme. Dancing and music were the principal diversions of the evening, while a feature which caused a great deal of amusement was the mock wedding, the contracting par-ties being Miss Aileen Stark and John O'Conner, Between dances, refreshments were served. vent she says; "This is just a little place, over near the Swiss border, and we were in a French hospital, only two American nurses, and from time to time there were American soldiers. They would be sent in, somehow. And you can't imagine how they waited for us each day, just because they wanted to hear good old United States. I just suppose our boys would have died if there hadn't been American women over here. Of course we love the poilus, they are the sweetest things, so patient, so appealing, much more like children than our boys. Our boys are boys; they suffer pain like heroes; that's the only time when they seem grown up. But oh, they have the best spirits, they are the pluckiest

Then, because she had wasted her adjective on the French she had to borrow it back-"our boys are the sweetest things, every one of them.
"It is safe to say that if our boys go back spoiled-and how can it be otherwise when every woman over here considers it her duty to spoil them-they have persuaded all their sisters and their cousins and their aunts that they, too, are the best things in the world. "There is no one who does not be-lieve he or she was in the very center, of the thing when it happened, in the very place where the war most came to an end. Of course, all those who were in Paris, know it was the place to be. But then there are so many places to be in Paris, and one simply could not be
