

OREGON-PROJECTS ARE INCLUDED IN LANE'S PROGRAM

Standpat Republican Leaders
From Eastern States Expected to Oppose Reclamation Plan.

WEST AND SOUTH ARE SOLID

Deschutes and Owyhee Projects
Both to Be Carried Through if Bill Passes Next Spring.

Washington, March 22.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—Oregon has particular reason to keep its eye on the land settlement legislation proposed by Secretary Lane, which was introduced in the filibuster in the last session of congress, but will be a live issue when the extra session of congress is called.

The interior department, at Secretary Lane's direction, is making such preliminary investigations as it can with the limited funds at its disposal, and one of those investigations concerns the Big Deschutes irrigation project in Central Oregon. By the time congress can act, if it does act, the question of reservoir sites for that project will have been fully investigated.

Owyhee Project Assured
This is not the only Oregon project which is likely to have consideration. The smaller Owyhee project in Eastern Oregon, which already has received the approval of the department and has been marked for early action when funds are again available for extension of reclamation, also has direct concern in the outcome.

It is unlikely that there will be any conflict in the two Oregon projects. If congress provides the money, both can go forward, provided the report of the investigation on the Deschutes is favorable.

Congressman Taylor of Colorado, who introduced the Lane bill at the recent session, has announced that he will reintroduce the measure on the opening day of the new session and urge it with energy. He expresses the hope that the appropriation will be made for $500,000, as that would still be much less than Canada, Australia and other countries are doing to establish returning soldiers upon the land.

Lane Favors Action
Secretary Lane indorses the stand of the Colorado congressmen. Hundreds of letters are coming to his department daily in approval of the plan, and men of the army and navy, who have heard something of it, are writing in large numbers for information. He believes the country wants something done, and wants it soon.

Meantime the shifting of control in the senate and house to the Republicans is a cause for worry to the friends of this legislation. It is not a partisan question, but the ruling powers of the Republican come from states which have little interest in the subject. Massachusetts and Pennsylvania will be most powerful in the councils of those who will determine what shall be done.

Senator Penrose already has indicated that he will go to almost any length to get the bill passed.

COVENANT DEBATED BEFORE MEMBERS OF REALTY BOARD

"37 Grand Senators" Lauded By Ralph Duniway, Who Scores
"Misstatements" of Taft.

IRVINE DEFENDS LEAGUE

Declares Opposition Would Have Existed From Some Source
Regardless of Form of League.

That we entered the war to make the world safe for democracy is "rot" according to Ralph R. Duniway, who debated the negative of the League of Nations issue before the Realty Board at the Benson hotel Friday afternoon. B. F. Irvine, associate editor of The Journal, supported the effort of Mr. Duniway, according to Mr. Duniway, statements in behalf of a League of Nations made by former President William Howard Taft in Portland recently were "misstatements" and lost to Mr. Taft the possibility of ever receiving Mr. Duniway's vote for any office to which in the future Mr. Taft might aspire.

The League of Nations, said Mr. Duniway, would constitute a "super-government" and the senators who obstruct favorable consideration of the covenant of world peace are in Mr. Duniway's definition "37 grand senators" who are "misstatements" and lost to Mr. Taft the possibility of ever receiving Mr. Duniway's vote for any office to which in the future Mr. Taft might aspire.

Mr. Duniway, according to Mr. Duniway, statements in behalf of a League of Nations made by former President William Howard Taft in Portland recently were "misstatements" and lost to Mr. Taft the possibility of ever receiving Mr. Duniway's vote for any office to which in the future Mr. Taft might aspire.

Other bombs of the negative were hurled at the generalizations alleged to be offered in substitute for specific discussion of the terms of the covenant. Also, the war censorship upon the transatlantic cables has something to do with the League of Nations, for Mr. Duniway assailed this censorship vigorously.

Mr. Irvine assured the attentive Realty board members that opposition to the League of Nations did not originate with Mr. Duniway, nor even with the 37 obstructionist senators. "It began in the first moments of history and was voiced by Cain when he asked, 'Am I my brother's keeper?'" declared the league advocate.

"Opposition to the league constitution did not wait for the provisions of the constitution to be announced," continued Mr. Irvine. "It did not wait even for the convening of the peace conference. It did not wait even for the American delegates to the peace conference to be selected. It did not wait even for the armistice to be signed."

"Progress toward the league principle has been made at every step. It has been ambushed, has been attacked from the rear, has been assailed on the flanks, but has never been squarely met by a foe who stood up in front and fought as brave men fight, blow on blow."

"The attack on the league covenant is not an attack on the league constitution. There would have been the same fight on it by the same men if the declaration of independence had been adopted at the conference and brought back to America as the league constitution. There would be the same pettifoggery, flaw picking attack on it by the same men if the constitution of the United States had been adopted at Paris and submitted as the league constitution. It would be the same if the 10 commandments had been adopted as the league constitution. It would be the same if Jesus Christ's Sermon on the Mount had been adopted as the league constitution."

The whole history of this fight has been a rear attack on the principle, and this peanut picking to pieces of the league constitution is but a symptom of the general fight all along the line on the league principle. The constitution is the convenient excuse, a camouflage of the real purpose. In truth, if the constitution had been framed along the lines suggested by Mr. Lodge, Mr. Knox and the others now attacking it, it would have been attacked in the same way that the present constitution is attacked."

Returning American Soldiers Say
Expedition Not Properly
Equipped for Arctic.

New York, March 22.—(U. P.)—The auxiliary cruiser Louisiana docked this morning. Aboard were four detachments of the Eleventh air service construction company of 13 officers and 225 men, casual companies of six officers and 415 men. Six Brest convalescent detachments of seven officers and 569 men, 12 casual officers, 44 nurses, 24 soldiers' wives and 27 wives of naval men.

Alfred Starke, Detroit, was one of the 17 men who came in on the Louisiana, who was in the fighting at Archangel. He was attached to Company M, 339th infantry, which arrived at Archangel September 6.

He said the American troops were inadequately equipped for such an expedition. He declared the temperature was 30 below zero and the men had no snowshoes or fleece-lined coats, such as the natives wore. He said the cold was terrible and many men died from exposure.

His unit marched along the Vologoda railroad a hundred miles. Their first engagement with red troops was when they had been marching 10 days, he said. Four members of his company were killed and 15 others wounded. He said the Bolsheviks were good fighters and he had several hand to hand encounters with them. He was wounded by a hand grenade thrown by a red soldier.

He said the reds had the latest type of French guns and were in command of German officers. On October 28, 1918, he said his unit found three wounded German officers. "Unfortunately, however, they died on us," was his comment. "We would have enjoyed standing the mbefore a firing squad."
