OUTFITTING BOATS FOR HALIBUT RUN OFF OREGON SHORE

More Boats Than Formerly Are Expected to Engage in Fishing; Gas Engines to Be Used.

PRICE OUTLOOK UNCERTAIN

Salmon Fishing Season Opens on May 15 and Cannerymen and Gillnetters Are Busy.

Preparations for the halibut fishing season off the coast of Oregon are going on with unusual vigor this year, and the indications are that more boats than formerly will engage in the business this year. At the plant of the Burke Fish company, Front and Pettygrove streets, five halibut fishing boats are being outfitted. The boats are 65-footers and are equipped with gasoline engines.

As in former years the boats will make both Newport on Yaquina Bay, and Portland, where the company has cold storage plants. Some 12 to 15 tons of ice and five tons of frozen herring, the fish to be used as bait, are taken out on each fishing trip. The boats are provisioned sufficiently to permit them to remain on the fishing banks for a week or more.

Owing to the fact that the supply of cold storage fish has been unusually heavy in the past year, the price outlook is said to be uncertain.

The Burke Fish company froze half a million pounds of fish last season. Much of the product of the season was shipped to the east and the middle western states.

Local marine supply houses are benefiting by the purchase of equipment and supplies used by the halibut fishing fleet.

The salmon fishing season opens May 15, and the cannerymen, gillnetters, trappers, seiners and trollers, as well as purse seiners, are getting ready for the opening of the season. More trollers will be off the mouth of the Columbia river this year than ever before. The city of Ilwaco, on the Washington side, is coming to the front as a trolling center, a large number of boats now being outfitted at points along the bayshore from Ilwaco to Chinook. A considerable number of new trollers have been built during the past year.

BUILDERS WILL MEET MAYOR

Portland's shipbuilding future, and particularly the industrial outlook, will be discussed this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the office of Mayor George L. Baker, by prominent local shipbuilders and other interests in a continuance of the building program.

The meeting was called by the mayor. It is expected that the outcome of the meeting will be the adoption of some kind of a definite program, whereby concerted action can be taken to keep the shipbuilding industry alive, after the present wood and steel contracts for the government shall have been completed at the local yards.

It is stated that the wooden yards will have finished their work for the government by August next, and that the steel shipbuilding program will come to an end in October, unless congress appropriates money for its continuance.

Means will be taken to care for the industrial workers who face the probability of being out of a job when the present contracts have been completed. Establishment of new industries to fill the breach will also be discussed at today's meeting.

Ship Launching Announced

William Cornfoot, president of the Albina Engine & Machine works, stated today that his plant would launch its 14th steel ship for the government next Wednesday at 11:30 o'clock. Another launching is scheduled to take place April 30. The shipbuilding plant, which has been rushing work on its contracts, has suffered some delay on account of inability to get its boilers for the steamers at the proper time. There has been no scarcity of steel materials, however.

SPECIAL EASTER SERVICES HELD IN CITY'S CHURCHES

Victory Loan Divides Honors, All Pastors Urging Their Congregations to Give Full Support.

BELIEF IN GOD GREATER

Bishop Sumner Says Prayer Never So Universal as Today; Dr. Boyd Speaks of Faith.

The glory of the resurrection, the first great victory of the Christian era, was widely proclaimed in crowded Portland churches Sunday. Special Easter music was provided in the religious temples of the city, and masses of worshipers surged into the flower bedecked edifices for the Easter sermons.

The Victory loan divided honors with the Easter celebration. All Portland pastors urged their congregations to fully support the last loan of the government, which "is a religious as well as a patriotic duty."

Speaking on the great victory of the first Eastern morn, the Rt. Rev. Walter T. Sumner declared yesterday:

"Never have the people of the world believed in God as they do today. Never has prayer been more universal. When the hordes of advancing Germans at last were started back, when the allies felt that their darkest hour had passed, then it was that the great leaders, Haig, Foch and Pershing, looked at one another, and one of them said: 'Someone has been praying; this is the hand of God.'

"The greatest literature of all time would not have been written, the literature that slants across the world the glory of this Easter morning could not have been written but for the belief of these men in the resurrection of Jesus Christ," asserted Dr. John H. Boyd. "And what an infinite loss it would be to the world if we think of the glorious life and faith of the man of Galilee as blotted out."

"The resurrection has given to human life a meaning," offered Father O'Hara. "It is a beacon light on the mountain top to guide us home. To refuse to be led by the resurrection is to be blind."

"The resurrection is the crowning miracle in the wonderful life of the compelling Christ, and it has fastened its grip upon the world's chronology, moral activities, and destiny," Rev. Francis Burgette Short is quoted.

"Easter is more than a great church festival," Rev. Edward Constant averred. "It is the people's feast of immortality, a time of glad anticipation, the springtide of hope in the human soul."
