and so imperialistic that it will require a military campaign to enforce it.

In support of this view I have seen the recommendations of General Franchet d'Esperey, which the French government transmitted to the allied and associated representatives of the peace conference. This communication was dated on Easter Sunday, April 20. The general says among other things that a crisis was forming in Bulgaria around the national feelings. The satisfaction of the Greek claims in Thrace, of Roumania in the Drougea and of the Serb claims over Western Bulgaria, will, he says, "cause a Balkan agitation which can be suppressed only by important means." The general adds that for this reason he recommended a month ago that 14 divisions of troops be formed. The general recommends that Bulgaria and Turkey be not informed of the peace terms until Hungary has been made to accept those submitted to her and Roumania has completed the demobilization of her army. He adds: "One must foresee rapid action compelling successive phases to a quietus on Hungary. The Roumanian army must be reorganized and furnished with equipment. Only then should the peace question be taken up with Bulgaria."

MILITARISM NOT OVERCOME
The Italians say that a peace requiring in the Balkans alone 15 divisions to enforce it is not a peace of disarmament, which Wilson speaks of in his proclamation. The Italians conclude by saying that, if other nations, even those which compose Austria, are to be allowed such full scope for the imperialism, why should Italy be required to give up her claims in the Adriatic because of principles, which find no genuine application elsewhere? Why should Fiume alone be considered as belonging to the inland, when the conference shows no disposition to apply this formula to Saloniki, Dedeagatch and Constantinople, whose commercial situation is similar to that of Fiume? Why should Italy not be allowed to protect herself on the coast by a strategic shore against the continuing Balkan conflicts, which, in spite of Mr. Wilson's declaration, the progress of events make inevitable?

Accidentally Discovered

Special Cable to The Journal and The Chicago (Copyright, 1919, by Chicago Daily News Co.) Coblenz, Germany, April 25.—A dramatic climax in a week of sensational events halted the wedding in the Rhine village of Irlich last Sunday of Sergeant Charles J. Vinces of 10339 Edgemoor avenue, Chicago, and Stella Metz, a buxom German fraulein. Vinces holds the rank of M. D. in field hospital No. 1, located in Irlich, while the prospective bride lived in Eggers, where field hospital No. 15, also a part of the Second division, is located.

Hun-American Wedding Halted Rhine Countryside Scandalized

When the plans for this wedding were accidentally discovered the American army authorities and German villagers were thrown into a turmoil. An officer of "GIB," which is the army secret service branch, after an investigation of the supposed German defiance of the anti-fraternization orders, mysteriously ordered the authorities to keep their hands off while waiting further developments. The excitement of the Germans over the coming ceremony spread over the countryside. The romance leaked out when Sergeant Vinces boldly met his intended and presented her with a bouquet of flowers when she stepped off the train dressed in the regulation bridal outfit with an amazing white hat, long veil and white gloves. She had golden hair and pearly teeth. The couple marched up the street, followed by an impressive crowd of boisterous Americans and chattering Germans, toward the church. There a hitch occurred on account of a breakdown of the truck bringing Pearl Hawkins, a mail man of the Second division, who had been selected to perform the ceremony. In the meantime the bride scandalized the villagers by accepting a cigarette from one of Sergeant Vinces' comrades and blowing the smoke through the bridal veil. Instead of mingling with the Germans and answering their questions, she permitted the American soldiers to slap her on the back, responding only, "Good, hot!" Finally, the daughter of a family where Vinces was billeted tearfully appealed to him not to marry the brazen creature, who was unworthy of an American sergeant, arguing that the wedding was illegal in Germany, as the laws had not been announced. Vinces, though not understanding German, was moved by the tears of the maiden and strode to the side of his intended. In loud and forcible English, he ordered the frivolous one to leave. The latter, fulfilling the natives' evil estimates of her character, started to undress in front of the church. She tore off the white waist, disclosing an old shirt, and then removed her thin veil and golden wig, showing the close clipped black head of Corporal William O. Morris of East Orange, N. J., with the rank of M. D. in field hospital No. 15. "The verrucose Americaner" ("The crazy American"), grunted the Germans on dispersing and returning to their afternoon beer and pinochle.
