

TRANSSEA FLIGHT AGAIN POSTPONED

Mid-Atlantic Weather Conditions Unfavorable and British Airmen Wait.

St. Johns, N. F., May 5.—The transatlantic flight was abandoned again Sunday by the British aviators here. Conditions in the morning were ideal for a "take off" and it was expected one or both airmen would get away, but later midocean weather conditions were reported as unfavorable.

This forenoon a west wind prevailed, giving rise to the belief that the venture would be attempted. Five American destroyers, Nos. 10, 72, 119, 116 and 147, arrived at Trepassey this morning and a large cruiser is in the offing. It is understood that all these vessels, and others which will follow, will remain at Trepassey until the N. C. planes from Rockaway Point, N. Y., arrive, after which the flotilla will proceed to its definite positions along the route to the Azores, which will be followed by the American naval fleet.

The steamer Digby, which is understood to be bringing the big Handley-Page machine, another entrant for the transatlantic flight, left Liverpool Friday afternoon for St. Johns, and is due about the end of the present week.

Astorians Will Test New Purse Seine Law

Astoria, May 5.—A test case, to obtain a supreme court decision on the 1917 purse seine law was started in the justice court Saturday. The law prohibits fishing with purse seines in the Columbia east of a line from the shore end of the north jetty to the knuckle of the south jetty, four miles from the government dock at Fort Stevens.

With a view of making more clear the law, which does not specifically prohibit the placing of this class of gear in the water, the Norbiad purse seine law, prohibiting the placing of gillnets in the water east of the given line, was passed by the recent legislature. To settle the question, the Union Fishermen's Packing company rigged out a purse seine craft and dropped the net within the restricted waters. A complaint was sworn to by Deputy Game Warden Larson, and the defendant fined $25 in the justice court. The case was immediately appealed and will be taken to the circuit court where, by agreement, a similar decision will be rendered and the matter placed before the supreme court.
