Wool Market Has PRUNE MARKET HAS a Mixed Tone

Excellent Demand and High Prices Are Shown for Fine Stock Here.

By Hyman M. Cohan
Market for weel is somewhat mixed in character all over the country at this time. There remains a very singgish call for coarse fleece, but for fine and medium wools the demand as good. Present values on fleece here range from 25c, to 45c and 50c a pound, a very wide sured, with the lower prices the nominal basis for coarse stock and the extreme values for fine and medium offerings. While the call is slow for course wools and grade stock and there is active bidding for this, although the country is not very keen about

Undertone is rather strong at this time in the hide market, due both to the fact that the May and June takeoff is of better quality than the and June takeoff is of better quality than the winter offerings, and likewise that the demand is improving. City takeoff calfakins are quoted at 60c a pound, with country at 45c a pound. Market for mehair is quoted from 50c to 55c a pound here for the day, but the trend of the market is not quite so favorable because the trade has about filled its orders and purchases for the immediate future would therefore be only for speculation. With an apparently easier situation indicated, buyers are inclined to believe that 50c a pound; will be the extreme top for long staple within a day or so, as top for long staple within a day or so, as the real market price here has been from 10a to 15c above the country's basis, due to ex-treme competition among the cutrenched firms
