SENATOR BORAH OPPOSES PLEDGE TO AID FRANCE

By J. Bart Campbell
Washington, May 8.—(I. N. S.)—Republican senators opposed to the League of Nations covenant as inextricably interwoven with the peace treaty were not in accord today with President Wilson's pledge to propose to the senate that the United States be committed to immediate aid to France in the event of an unprovoked attack on that nation by Germany in the future.

While Senator Borah, Progressive Republican of Idaho, declined to comment on the peace treaty as a whole, until he had an opportunity to study the text, he permitted it to be known that the president's pledge to France did not meet with his approval.

SMOOT FAVORS IT

On the other hand Senator Smoot, old guard Republican of Utah, expressed the opinion that senators, in particular, and American public sentiment in general, would offer no special objection to the United States pledging assistance to France if that country were again invaded by Germany. Senator Smoot added that he did not anticipate the president's pledge would be one of the chief bones of contention when the opponents and proponents of the proposed League of Nations were called upon to consider the resolution of ratification, framed by the senate foreign relations committee, by which the senate will dispose of the peace treaty.

Both Borah and Smoot reiterated that they were still opposed to the League of Nations covenant in its amended as well as its original form. Representing as they do different trends of thought and courses of action in the senate, their divergence of views regarding the president's pledge were privately reflected by other Republican senators who lean toward either the Borah or Smoot viewpoint.

WANTS NO ALLIANCE
"I am opposed to the United States entering into any kind of an alliance with any foreign nation," Borah declared with an emphasis that permitted no doubt as to his meaning. "How is an unprovoked attack on France by Germany to be determined?" Borah inquired. "How is it to be determined when an attack on one nation by another is provoked? I believe that the American people are capable of deciding, when the time arrives for them to do so, when they shall again go to the assistance of France, without the senate being asked to commit them to an entangling alliance."

Senator Smoot declared, that in his judgment, France was too highly regarded by most Americans for there to be any "successful opposition" in or out of the senate "to any proposal that the United States be committed to a policy of preparedness to help the French people again in case Germany ran amuck."

LODGE RESERVES COMMENT

Although strongly intimating that he would be found with Borah and other Republican senators in opposition to the League of Nations pact when the senate considered it, Smoot stated that he did not believe that leaders of the "aim Republican majority" could muster enough votes to prevent the ratification of the modified league covenant as well as the ratification of the treaty except with certain important reservations.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, who is to be chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, announced that he did not propose to attempt a discussion of the treaty until they had the official document before them.

A tentative program with regard to the peace treaty has already been mapped out by Lodge and other Republican leaders of the senate. According to present indications, the resolution of ratification will be reported to the senate by the foreign relations committee without recommendation.

PREPARE AMENDMENTS

Lodge is expected, as the Republican floor leader, to name the committee on committees which will designate the personnel of the Republican majority membership of the foreign relations committee. It is anticipated that the resolution of ratification will largely reflect the views of Lodge and his anti-League of Nations associates.

It is proposed by them that the senate adopt the resolution of ratification in such form as will present to other nations a series of interpretations of the peace treaty, especially with regard to the modified League of Nations covenant, as will provide an official notification as to how the pact is to be construed and is to be acted on thenceforth by the treaty-making body of the United States government.

The real fight on the peace treaty and the league covenant is expected to be on the floor of the senate and not in the foreign relations committee.

WOULD NULLIFY PLEDGE

The avowed opposition of Republican senators like Borah of Idaho; Poindexter of Washington; McCormick of Illinois; Moses of New Hampshire, and Johnson of California, to the United States entering into any sort of a League of Nations, or any kind of "entangling alliance" probably will center about determined efforts on their part to amend the resolution of ratification in accordance with their views, or to otherwise recant it so as to leave the United States uncommitted to any definite foreign policy that would tie this country up with any other nation.

Administration senators are confident, however, they declared today, that the "anti-leaguers," whether Republicans or Democrats, will, "on the final show-down," be in "such a hopeless minority" that the resolution of ratification will, more or less, conform to the wishes of President Wilson himself, and the peace treaty, with the League of Nations covenant, will stand virtually unaltered as to its purposes and meaning so far as the United States is concerned.

STUDYING DOCUMENT

These administration senators added that they were certain that most Republican senators would be found siding with the administration's desire to have the peace treaty and the league covenant disposed of by the senate expeditiously, although a series of lengthy speeches by both opponents and proponents of certain articles or clauses of the momentous documents was, of course, to be regarded as inevitable.

In the meanwhile, both Democratic and Republican leaders of the senate were displaying a noticeable and not to be unexpected disposition today to refrain from detailed public utterance on any phase of the document until they had been able to digest its multitudinous details before placing themselves on record before not only the American people but the whole world.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulified coconut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Adv.

Sinn Feiners Deny Any Aid From Russ

Dublin, May 8.—(U. P.)—Parry Holland, secretary of the Sinn Fein, declared today that a report that the Russian Bolsheviks had voted 500,000,000 rubles a month to aid the Sinn Fein is "absurd and an anti-Irish canard." This is the first intimation received in this country that such a report had been circulated.
