TODAY'S FORECASTS Portland and Vicinity-Tonight and

WEATHER CONDITIONS

High pressure prevails from Montana eastward to the Atlantic coast. The highest readings are in the Lake region and Upper Mississippi valley. Over most of the remainder of the country the pressure is moderately low. Precipitation has occurred over a belt reaching from New Mexico and Texas to the Middle Atlantic coast, and in parts of North Pakota, Montana, Scuthern California and British Columbia. The heaviest mainfall reported was one inch, at Memphis, Tenn. The weather is much warmer in Northern Nevada and on the North Atlantic coast, and is much colder in the lower Lake region. The temperature is generally below normal on the Atlantic and Pacific slopes. Killing frost is reported from Wyoming, Montana and North Dakota, and light frost from Western New York and Southeastern Idaho.

During the war building tradesmen were either in the service or turned to other forms of employment, according to Mr. McGovern, and the actual building was not even enough to care for normal needs, let slone the abnormal conditions incident to the war. With labor employed, Mr. McGovern sees no chance of a decrease in food prices. "It has been so after every war," he said. "Prices have always been higher at the close of war, and we are now in a maelstrom from which low prices cannot be expected. As to salmon, packing costs will justify the same prices as we obtained last year. Some
