

Irish See Plan in Encouraging Delegates' Tour

SINN FEINERS ARE OVERJOYED WITH SUCCESS OF VISIT

Government Gave Delegates Every Freedom and Opportunity to See Conditions.

ONLY SECESSIONISTS HEARD

Was Premier's Idea to Demonstrate Hopelessness of "All or Nothing" Policy of Sinn Fein?

Dublin, Ireland, May 21.—Now that the American delegates have left Ireland, the true importance of their visit may be fairly estimated. Nobody anticipated its widespread effect. The Sinn Feiners themselves never hoped for so much success. They secured an unexpected increase of public sympathy in Ireland and were able to convey to America the impression that Ireland was practically unanimous in demanding an Irish republic and refusing any other solution. That three American citizens should be able to enter Ireland at the request of the British minister and with British passports on the declared intention of procuring the cessation of Ireland from the British empire was sufficiently startling, but it became more startling when they pursued the policy in company with the republican leaders of making speeches and doing acts for which such leaders in the absence of such auspices would be sent to prison. Acts rigidly forbidden before the delegates arrived were for the time being permitted, and crowds in Dublin, Cork, Limerick and Galway had the unusual satisfaction of holding processions, waving republican flags and singing soldiers' songs entirely untroubled by the police. It all looked too easy. Wise people said that the government knew what it was about and had a deep purpose in its policy of noninterference.

IRISH WERE DIVIDED

However, as usual, Ireland's government was of two minds. Friday evening last week there was a military display such as Dublin had not seen since the Easter week revolt. Soldiers with steel helmets, gleaming bayonets, armored cars and Lewis machine guns took possession of the street in which the Mansion house is situated. The republican parliament had been held without objection and had adjourned. The place was empty, awaiting a social function at which the delegates were to be present in the evening. For two hours the military remained, and then the guests among them the delegates, began to arrive. They were held up by the military cordon and with them De Valera, his colleagues, the archbishops and two bishops. The delegates demanded the right of passage and it was conceded to them on condition that they went alone. But they would not go without their Sinn Fein friends. For a time there was a deadlock, but finally the military marched off as unexpectedly it arrived, and the guests flowed into the Mansion house.

HOW NOT TO DO IT

Dublin learned, to its surprise, what it was all about. It meant merely that the police, after a week of connivance and inactivity, desired to secure the arrest of some Sinn Feiners who had escaped from Mountjoy prison more than a month ago and who were supposed to be in the Mansion house. The offense for which they were placed in jail did not differ in substance from the speeches and demonstrations which have been going on for a week in Dublin without protest. The most convinced unionists agree that it is a remarkable example of how not to do it.

PERSHING MEETS SON ON ARRIVAL AT BREST

General Pershing meeting his son, Warren, on the deck of the S. S. Leviathan when she steamed into Brest, France. Secretary of War Baker, who maintained a guardianship over the boy on the trip over, is shown with the two, looking over the rail at the city. This was the first time father and son had met since the general left the United States in 1917. Warren is the commander's only child, his wife and other children having perished in a fire several years ago.

Then came the visit of the delegates to the west. They were told beforehand they must not go to Westport without permit and so, of course, they went. The Westport military area since the recent brutal murder of the resident magistrate there has been closed to entrance except to those with permits. The insistence upon permits in the military areas has been rigid. I have known judges proceeding to their law courts in Clonsilla being obliged to get permits. The delegates by displaying their passports, sought to enter Westport and the Sinn Fein leaders sought to enter with them. The military, however, followed the rule and the visit did not take place. But the situation was full of satisfaction for the Sinn Feiners in either way. If they got in with the delegates they would have made the military restrictions ridiculous; if they failed they had evidence for the American Irish of conditions under military law which no propagandist could rival. No wonder one hears the comment that the Sinn Feiners got all the best stunts during the visit.

NATIONALISTS IGNORED

The delegates were kept away from all representatives in every Irish section except those of the Sinn Feiners. There is an organization of Irish nationalist soldiers who fought in the war. This organization has addressed a petition to the king praying that Ireland's national claims may be submitted to the peace conference on the ground that they involve the difference between Great Britain and Ireland which one side alone should not be allowed to determine. These men are not republicans. They do not contemplate secession from the British empire, but want friendship with the British by whose side they fought. What they look for is an amicable settlement. They addressed a letter to the delegates asking that a deputation be received to state their views, but the letter was not acknowledged.

Belfast is a place where the constitutional nationalists greatly outnumber the Sinn Feiners, but the only people representatives of the smallest minority in the city. If it is once admitted that secession from the British empire is the sole policy aimed at, there no doubt will be a referendum even to consider anything else. The objection to the all or nothing policy is that it is most likely to lead to nothing. Indeed, Irish observers who look upon the prime minister as a modern Machiavelli believe that he encouraged the American visit with a view to showing the world that he is in favor of an altogether impracticable proposition by Irishmen who have reduced his good will for the old standard home rule principles to impotence.

Berger Can't Vote Until Case Decided

Washington, May 21.—(U. P.)—Investigation of Victor Berger's right to a seat in the house may be delayed until the supreme court reaches a decision on his appeal from conviction under the espionage law for refusing permits of the special investigating committee indicated today. Berger will have the privilege of the floor until his case is determined. He will not be allowed to address the house or vote, however.

Thin Ones Are Popular

Holton, Kan., May 21.—(I. N. S.)—A popular game in rural circles in this vicinity is the "avoids" party. The girls are weighed, their weights written on slips of paper. All the slips are put into a hat and the young man draws. He is allowed to take the girl he draws to supper, paying a half cent per pound for his meal.

SILESIA RESIST BEING PUT UNDER RULE OF POLAND

Whole Country Is in Spirit of Revolt Lest They Are Compelled to Submit to Poland.

By Ben Hecht

(Copyright, 1919, by Chicago Daily News Co.)
Breslau, Germany, May 21.—Every square foot of Silesia brightens with indignation and revolt. This entire section of Germany is on the verge of political apoplexy. Nearly all the Silesians I have interviewed since entering the province have already talked themselves hoarse.

"We will die rather than submit to Poland," said the president of the provincial government, Felix Philipp. "If Germany as a whole signs this peace the Silesian government will resign in a body and turn things over to the Bolsheviks. If Germany refuses to sign and the Poles try to occupy our territory, we will fight—every man, every woman and every child will fight. Let the entente put its blockade on. Starvation is preferable to the dishonor offered us."

This is a comparatively mild version of the Silesian state of mind. Breslau is not included in the territory handed to the Poles by the peace lords, but in Breslau the Silesian nationalistic movement is centering itself. Monster protest demonstrations occur daily here, in Oppeln and elsewhere in Silesia. Word has come that the Poles have occupied Posen, cut it off from communication with Germany and are preparing for a military offensive in the event that Germany refuses to sign the terms.

I encountered several Poles who are more bitter than the Silesians. They point out with furious phrases that Poland had been given only a small portion of the territory to which it was entitled. The prevailing Polish hopes of the future include the absolute suppression of the German in Silesia and the abolition of the German language and German schools—in fact, the same sort of a nationalistic campaign that was formerly conducted by the Germans. The Poles I have met likewise inform me that 90 per cent of Silesia consists of Poles. The Silesians point out with equal force that 87 per cent of Silesia consists of Germans.

The mobilization of German troops to resist the Poles' advance is proceeding openly. President Ebert assured me that this mobilization was not a renewal of German militarism but the result of the Silesian determination to become the saviors of "those unspeaking Poles."

Salmon Fry Saved From Shallow Water

Marshallfield, May 21.—Approximately 300,000 salmon fry were saved by Deputy Game Warden M. Thomas, who had a force of men at work in the Tenmile lake country. It was reported to the warden that the young fish were entrapped in a stream where there was but little water. The enormous mass of fish could not live in the shallow stream and were being washed out and placed in another stream.

Lady Arthur Paget Dies of Pneumonia in Paris Hospital

Paris, May 21.—(I. N. S.)—Lady Arthur Paget, formerly Miss Mary Stevens of Boston, died at the Hotel Ritz Tuesday night, following an attack of pneumonia, preceded by influenza.

Lady Paget was the wife of General Sir Arthur H. Paget. Her father at one time was the owner of the Tremont house in Boston. She was one of the leaders of London society, but was known principally because of her benefactions during the Boer war, she maintained a hospital ship. She was praised even from the Austro-Hungarian government in the world war for her Red Cross work, particularly in Serbia, where she was attached to the American Red Cross.

London Clergyman Would Encourage Smoking in Church

London, May 11.—(I. N. S.)—(By Mail.)—A movement to allow smoking in British churches has been started here and is being discussed at length in the press by clergy and laymen. The proposal seems to be making headway and it may not be long before men and women may be seen smoking cigars, cigarettes and pipes while listening to a sermon.

Dr. Fort Newton, pastor of the Temple of London, and one of the best known clergymen in London, favors the movement, saying: "The church is too much behind by custom and the respectability of it cramps good fellowship. People want the church to be less conventional."

Dr. Newton argues that the church of the future will not be so much a place of worship as a place for companionable gathering.

Day-Old Twins Baptized

East Youngstown, Ohio, May 20.—Twin boys were born to Mr. and Mrs. John Diodico, and, to prove their vitality, Stephen, 11 pounds, and Emery, 12 pounds, were taken the next morning to church, where they were baptized. The mother now has six boys and two girls and says she never "felt better or happier" in her life.
