Multnomah Ball Thursday to Be Gay

Brilliant Function Is Planned for Final Social Event of Club.

By Helen H. Hutchison
EXTENSIVE plans have been made for a brilliant function at Multnomah Amateur Athletic club on Thursday evening, the occasion being the last formal ball of the club for the season.

It is expected that this formal will be one of the largest and most elaborate affairs given during the entire year. The February formal was attended by more than 200 couples and was a delightful occasion.

The Knights of Columbus will entertain the enlisted men with a complimentary dancing party at the K. of C. building Vancouver barracks.

DRESS by Anne Rittenhouse

NEW YORK.—It looks as though the public were given a chance to see two new styles. Evidently, the indecision on the part of women to know where their waistline should be, led to this generosity on the part of the designers.

It was Cheruit of Paris who accentuated the hip-line and the waistline on one gown. When the gowns from the establishment first came into the American trade, women decided to take off one of the two or three belts, and merely because woman is inconsistent.

The designers gave her every chance to produce as many lines around her waist as she wanted, so that no one would be final and assert authority; but when she got the chance, she made up her mind to use only one.

Both lines today
This season the public, aided by the designers, have accentuated two lines around the middle of the body.

No woman today makes a pretense of having a small waist, but she seems to have a troubled desire to show that she realizes the formation of her anatomy.

It's an odd little tribute to nature. It has something in it of a woodman's trick of placing a bit of white cloth on a tree to mark the path.

Now, if the hips are marked by a thin ribbon or band, then a wide sash goes up to the waistline, and whichever way you turn it, you are apt to get two definite lines around a woman's figure between bust and knees.

Take the gown which is sketched. It is worn in a new play and has attracted unusual attention.

Actress Proves Surprise in 'New Role'

Mae Murray, Usually Drawing Room Queen, Plays Part of Simple Mountain Girl.

THE public associates winsome Mae Murray, former star of Ziegfeld's Follies, with Dame Fashion's latest creations and an environment of Bohemia's gilded cafes or society's finest drawing rooms.

But Mae proves a surprise in "What Am I Bid?"; her new film special, which opened this afternoon at the Strand. She plays a simple, illiterate mountain girl, clad in tatters.

This photoplay of the great outdoors, with its background of primitive forests and people by creatures swayed by primitive passions, is an unusually powerful picture. Its story grips. It appeals to the sympathy of audiences.

It is full of tense situations and has a few that come under the title of the spectacular.

Bob and Dorothy Finley, clever entertainers who scored a hit last season, are back again in a new repertoire of song and comedy gems.

The Terpsichore Duo offer a splendid dancing novelty. White and Knight are a pair of excellent vocalists and instrumentalists, while Barnes and Lorraine, a youthful pair, make 'em laugh with their comedy stuff put over by a skit, "Romance a La Handcar."

Garden Hints

Such plants as tomatoes, peppers, muskmelons, cucumbers and other vine crops may be guarded from disease and insects by spraying three or four times at intervals of two weeks with Bordeaux mixture. In this way the vines are protected until they have made vigorous growth and so they withstand any later attacks.

Portland roses are in season. If the roses are cut carefully each morning the blooming season will be prolonged. Fading roses and forming seed pods check the bloom and give the garden a ragged, untidy appearance.

When thinning the lettuce, set out a few plants in a moist, shady place; it is an easy matter to keep a supply of head lettuce through the early summer. Lettuce or California Cream Butter are good varieties for late planting.

Pick the blooms and berries from the strawberry plants that were set this season. The plants need the strength for making growth in order that there may be a full crop next season.

Grass and weeds take a new lease on life after a rain; thorough weeding and cultivation are necessary as soon as the ground is dry enough to work, if the garden is to be kept clean.

The Adventures of Jimmy Coon

His Friends Help
AND there sat poor Cousin Bruin, with that round basket on his head, minding over his eyes so that he couldn't see a wink, and he felt very low in his mind.

The Blue Jays, those blue coated policemen of the Great Forest, flew all around and scolded every minute and finally set off to find that wicked woman, the cause of all poor Cousin Bruin's trouble.

"Now," said Teddy Possum, who seemed to manage the whole thing, "this is the plan, I have been thinking out. First, all I will do is my long tail around that basket, and then when I begin to pull, Chatterbox, you and Jimmy Coon gnaw with your sharp teeth the splints of the basket Bruin tugged and Cousin Bruin will pull hard. Now, all together, one, two, three, go," and Teddy Possum pulled so hard that he fell over backward.

Chatterbox scolded and scolded and he bit and chewed with his sharp little white teeth. Jimmy Coon worked like a beaver. Cousin Bruin tugged and tugged, and all those poor animals fell on the ground just worn out. And Cousin Bruin's face was bleeding from the splints of the basket and so Jimmy Coon ran and got a pawful of black mud and tied it right on that cut place on Cousin Bruin's face with a piece of long grass.
