

American Seaplane Finishes First Transatlantic Flight

FIRST AIR TRIP FROM AMERICA TO ENGLAND CONCLUDED

YANKEE AVIATORS HAILED AS HEROES WHEN PLANE LANDS

First Successful Over-Ocean Flight Comes to End in Harbor of Plymouth in England.

CHEERED BY GREAT CROWDS

Band on American Cruiser Plays "Stars and Stripes Forever" as Birdmen Enter the Harbor.

By Edwin C. Hallinger
Plymouth, Eng., May 31.—(U. P.)—The famous navy seaplane NC-4, which sailed from New York harbor tonight after carrying the Stars and Stripes from America to England in the first transatlantic flight in history.

Lieutenant Commander A. C. Read and five men who took the great ship safely through the perils of the Atlantic air lanes, were hailed as the heroes they are when they skimmed into the bay at 2:26 o'clock this afternoon, climbed from their places in the cockpit and boarded the cruiser Rochester.

DAYS OF PILGRIMS RECALLED
They were greeted with hearty hand grasps by Admiral Plunkett and British Admiral Thubay and by their comrades of the NC-1 and NC-3 who failed to get across, while the stirring strains of "The Stars and Stripes Forever," played by the ship's band, blended with the cheering of many steam whistles and the cheering of thousands on the heights of the town.

The Nancy IV was berthed within a short distance of the spot where, nearly 200 years ago, the Pilgrim fathers embarked for the new world on the Mayflower, to settle the land whose sons have just returned to old England through the air.

PASSES OVER BREAST
At 6:27 o'clock this morning, the NC-4 started away from Ferrol, on the northern coast of Spain, where she had lain overnight after having been forced to descend in the middle of the Lisbon-Plymouth leg of the flight to have a leaky radiator repaired.

Soaring under bright skies, the giant seaplane crossed the Bay of Biscay, being reported within clock-like regularity by the American destroyers stationed along that stretch of her 300 mile flight. Over Brest, the famous American military port in France, she circled at an altitude of 1000 feet at 11 a. m., then turned away northward across the English channel on the last dash—140 miles. A fog obscured visibility in this area and the plane descended to within 200 feet of the gray waves, boring through the mist straight for Plymouth, her navigators setting the course.

BRITISH GREET TANKEES
At Plymouth a great crowd was waiting. The people had set all points of vantage. Thousands clustered on the Hoe, the historic eminence where, it is told, Drake calmly finished his game of bowls before going forth to fight the Spanish armada. Intercepted wireless messages rushed to London had told Britain of the progress of the flight and the word spread that the Americans were rapidly approaching their goal. Three British seaplanes dashed away to meet the conquerors of the air.

A navy observer constantly scanned the sky and water for some trace of the NC-4 after the British machines had disappeared. At 2:30 he saw her, and shouted to a telegraph operator, who flashed the news over a British admiralty wire to London, then the American navy headquarters, and to Paris, Brest and Washington by cable and by wireless.

CROWDS GREET AVIATOR
The weather had cleared and the NC-4 was plainly visible to the thousands who watched. The humming of her motor was heard, first faintly, then growing louder and mingling with the purr of the British seaplanes' engines, as they followed the American.

The NC-4 circled, then alighted outside the breakwater. The roar of cheers and of whistles increased, a great crescendo of sound as the machine taxied over the surface toward her berth, the spray flying, as many launch racing alongside ready to remove the crew.

Smiling, seemingly a bit abashed by the noise of welcome and the sight of the hundreds of waving hats and handkerchiefs on every vantage place ashore, the crew boarded the Rochester.

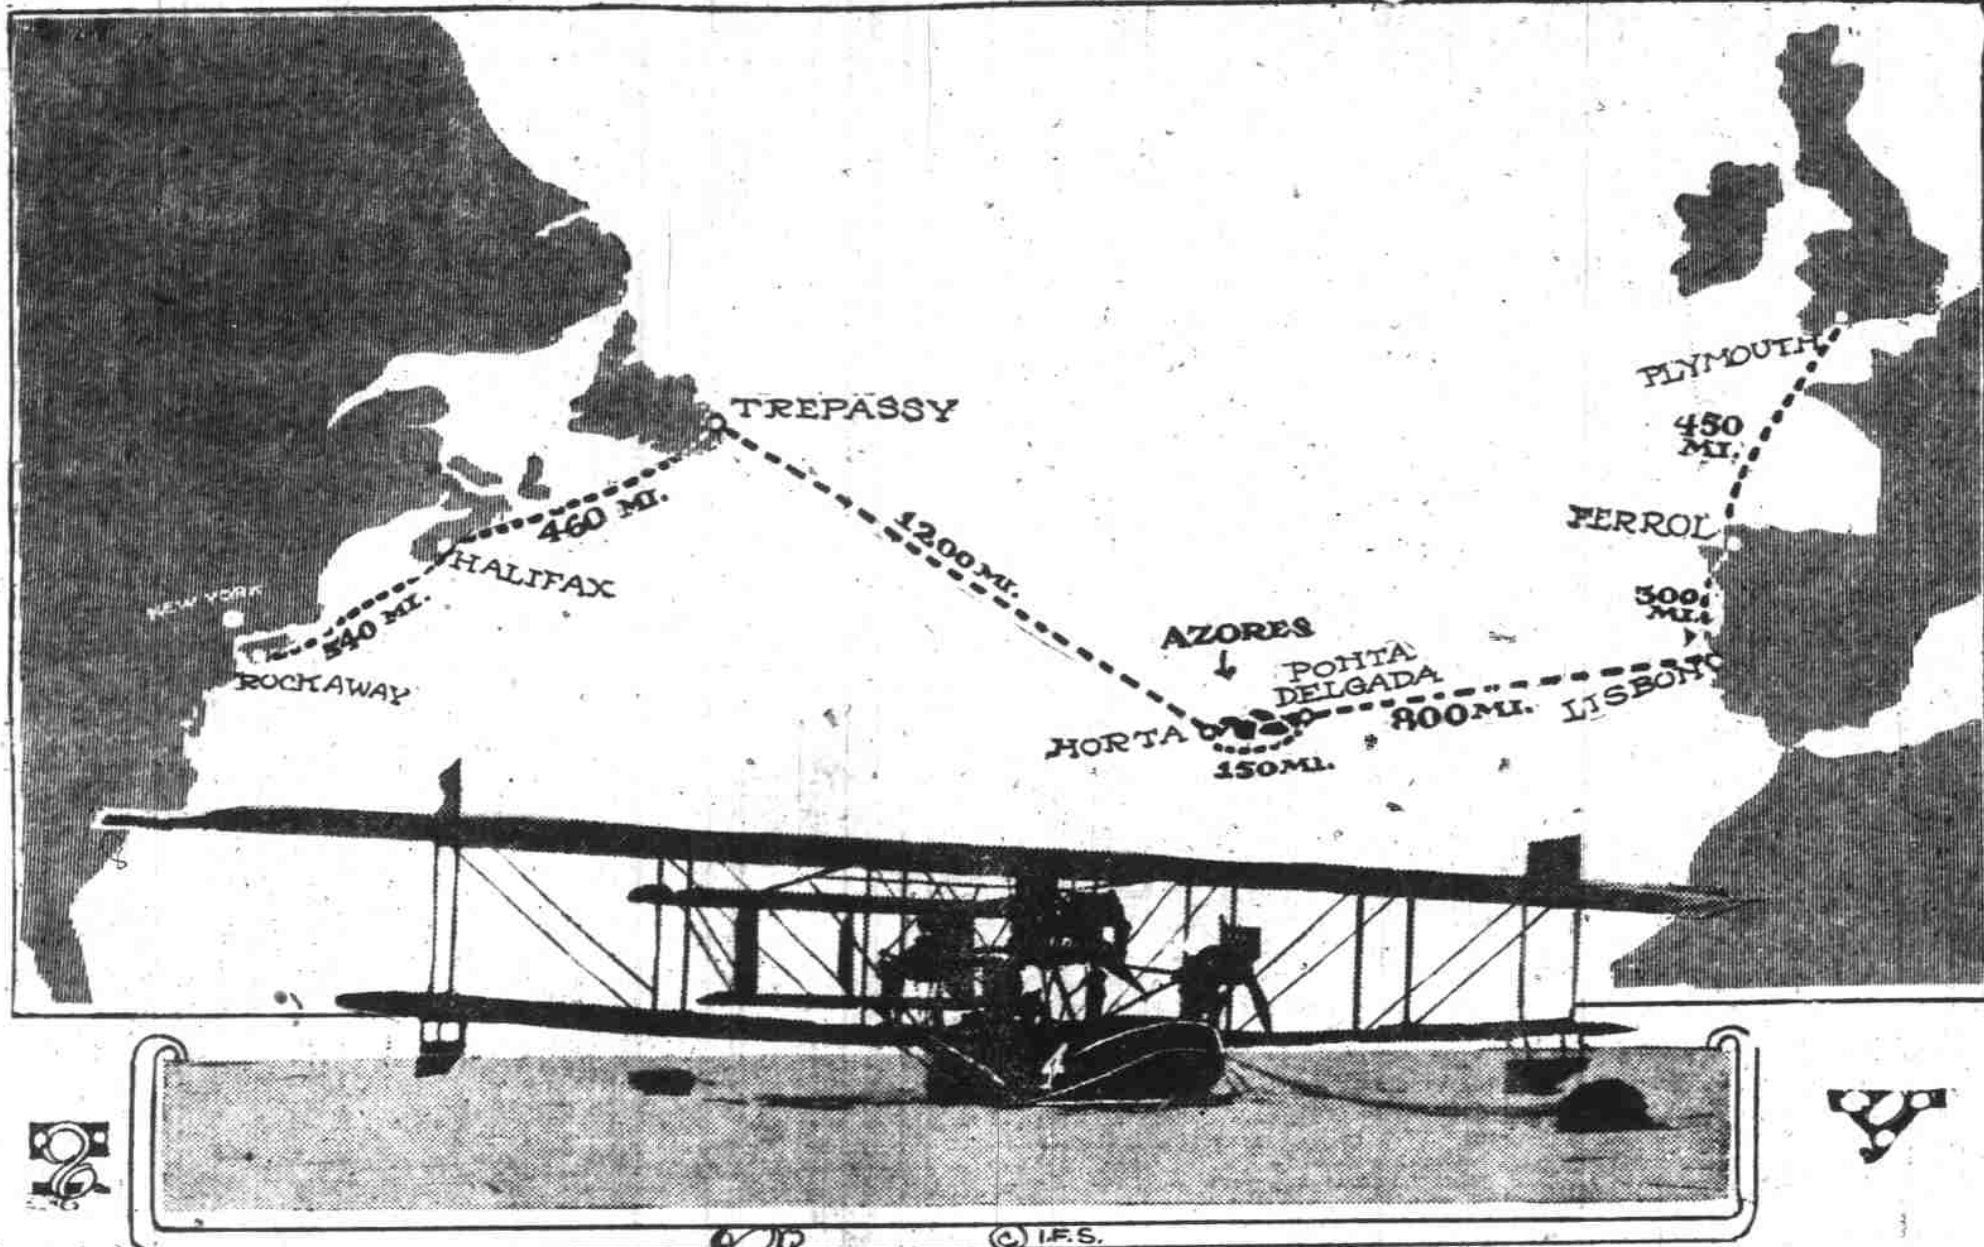

SENDS MESSAGE TO MOTHER
Ensign H. C. Rodd, radio operator, asked the United Press to send the following message to his mother in Cleveland:

"We had a wonderful trip and a good time. I worked the wireless constantly during the entire trip. I sent you a message when we were off New Foundland."

Lieutenant Walter Hinton of Van Wert, Ohio, relief pilot, said:

"We're ready to fly across the Atlantic again, and his sentiments seemed to be those of his companions."

Welcoming the Americans, the mayor made a short address, dwelling on the historical significance of their landing

The American naval seaplane NC-4, Lieutenant Commander Albert Cushing Read commanding, which arrived at Plymouth, England, Saturday on the seventh and final leg of its 3300 mile flight, made in actual flying time of 51 hours and 16 minutes, an average rate of speed of 72 miles per hour.

leaving headquarters, and to Paris, Brest and Washington by cable and by wireless.

The motors, the aviators said, were flawless.

PRESIDENT WILSON SENDS MESSAGE TO THE AVIATORS
Plymouth, Eng., May 31.—After the arrival of NC-4 today and the end of its epoch-making flight across the Atlantic, Lieutenant Commander Read received the following wireless message from President Wilson:

"Accept my heartfelt congratulations on the success of your flight. Accept for yourself and your comrades the expression of my deepest admiration. We are all heartily proud of you. You have won and deserve the distinction of adding still further laurels to our country."

Paris Peace Far Different From Clemenceau Peace
By Paul Scott Mowrer
Special Wireless to The Journal and The Chicago Daily News.

(Copyright, 1919, by Chicago Daily News Co.)
Paris, France, May 31.—Replying to the German complaint that it is not a Wilson peace but a Clemenceau peace which is being accorded Germany, Gustave Harve, the noted writer says that a strictly governmental peace would have included the following conditions:

1. Germany would have been disintegrated into component states and Prussian hegemony would have been ended.

2. The left bank of the Rhine would have been made a neutral state under French sovereignty with eventual absorption by France.

3. East Prussia would have been given to Poland.

4. As compensation for losses and the cost of the war France would have occupied not only the Saar Basin but the far richer Ruhr basin, the annual coal production of which exceeds 100,000,000 tons and upon which Germany's metallurgical and almost all her chemical industries depend.

"Then, indeed, the Germans might have moaned," adds M. Harve. "They would have moaned in vain. Nobody would have listened to them thinking of the innocent victims of their torpedos, of open towns crushed by their Goetz and Bertha's, of the sufferings of French and Belgian populations ground in their hell during five years of war, of the women of Lille forced to submit without distinction of age to certain sanitary conditions of more than 1,600,000 dead, of our northern department plundered and devastated as the Vandals themselves would not have plundered and devastated it. No. It is no Clemenceau peace which is being offered the Germans, and they can thank President Wilson for it."

Wheelwrights Will Not Arrive Here Till Monday Night

Mr. and Mrs. William D. Wheelwright of Portland, who arrived at Vancouver, B. C., Friday night on the liner Empress of Russia, from an extended visit in Japan, China and Russia, have delayed departure from the north and will not arrive in this city until Monday night, according to a message received by Mrs. A. A. Morrison Saturday evening.

Mr. Wheelwright, who is president of the Pacific Export Lumber company, has been making a study of trade possibilities in the Far East for Pacific Coast concerns and incidentally being extensively feted by his many friends in the Orient, where he has been many times and where he has many interests. The Wheelwrights were expected home Saturday night.

Y. M. C. A. Worker Is Back in America

R. R. Clark, who has been in France engaged as the chief of the construction department of the Y. M. C. A. for 18 months, has arrived in New York and will be home in a few days, according to word received here Saturday.

The enormous extent of the construction department's activity can only be appreciated from Mr. Clark's report, which states that $2,400,000 was expended in construction work alone. Four hundred and eight wooden "huts" were constructed for use of the "doughboys."

with a floor space aggregating 1,700,000 square feet, capable of accommodating 829,565 people. Mr. Clark had a large force of engineers and construction men assisting him.

For June Brides
Or for Home Use.

Its firm and striking outline, characteristic of the best ware of the last decade, is softened by a few simple lines of chaste ornament that emphasize its beauty, charm the eye, and still leave the impression of an essentially plain design.

It is finished with a soft gray lustre or "natural finish," and the smooth surface is easily cleaned, renewing the natural finish by doing so.
