

PARIS INFORMS
GAY DUKE BORIS
TO LEAVE TOWN

Nephew of Ex-Czar, Former Lion of European Society, Is Now Classed Among Undesirables.

SPAIN DOESN'T WANT HIM

Romanoff Gets Signal to Start for Exit After He Insults Host and Imbibes Too Freely.

By Robert J. Frew
Paris, June 2.—(By Mail).—(I. N. S.)—The Romanoffs, former reigning family of Russia, are under the darkest cloud in France. The republic has decreed that none of the old-time grand dukes of Russia, who used to lead the pre-war gaities of Montmartre, may return to France except to live in the strictest seclusion. Those who want to live in Paris or at Deauville or on the Riviera must first satisfy the French authorities that they intend to lead quiet lives.

Already one of their number, Grand Duke Boris, son of Grand Duke Vladimir and nephew of the ex-czar, has been expelled from French soil. Disregarding the French ban, he came to Paris with forged passes and was accompanied by a woman. Had he been content to hide himself incognito in some quiet corner of the country the complacent authorities probably would have left him in peace. But Boris could not forget that in 1913 he was the lion of the "Grand Saison" at Deauville and that during the ensuing winter he was prince of all the Montmartre fetes.

KICKS UP FUSS AT PARTY

He became intoxicated at a poker party at a financier's house near Paris and insulted his host and hostess as well as the other guests. The next day he was given 48 hours to leave France. He thereupon made for Spain to enjoy the amenities of the San Sebastian season, but before he could cross the frontier King Alfonso sent word that he was "undesirable" and with his companion he was held up at the frontier station of Hendaye.

Preceded by a telegram to King Victor Emmanuel asking for the hospitality of Italian soil, the grand duke next made his way to Monte Carlo and here he received word from Rome that he could find sanctuary across the Italian border. The Grand Duke Nicholas, former commander in chief of the Russian army, and Grand Duke Peter are also living in Italy.

Unless the Romanoffs return to favor with the republican government, American hostesses in Paris will deplore the loss of some of their liveliest guests.

WONDED BY SOCIETY

Before the war broke out the grand dukes were in great demand here for all afternoon and evening functions. Prominent among their entertainers were Mrs. W. B. Leeds, Mrs. William Ellis Corey, Mrs. Van Valkenburg (now Duchess of Oporto), Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. William Moore, Princess Albert Ransauill, Dorothy Deacon (Daughter of Boston), Duchess De La Rochefoucauld and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lehr.

Their guests included the Grand Dukes Vladimir, Boris, Cyril, Paul and Dimitri and a prominent figure in the same coterie was the Grand Duchess Anastasia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, also a Romanoff and the mother of the former crown princess of Germany. She had been banned from the German court by the ex-kaiser who thought her a flighty woman. The grand duchess and the grand dukes quickly gained the reputation of being the biggest tango "fans" of Paris and they were in great demand among the American society women here. Mostly they showed a marked predilection for the festivities staged by Mrs. Leeds and Mrs. Corey, especially for the latter's poetic dances at Chateau De Villegenis, near Versailles.

Johnson Boom to Be Formally Launched

Chester Rowell of Fresno, who was scheduled to serve as chairman, has been notified he will not be able to attend owing to illness. It is expected that Frank Flint of Los Angeles, former United States senator, will take the chair.

Company to Be Inspected
Eugene, June 12.—Company C, Oregon National Guard, will stand formal inspection and muster here on June 20, an order having been received from Adjutant General Conrad Straffin to that effect. Major W. G. White has been detailed as mustering and inspecting officer.
