Here They Are—New Shows in Portland

Program Changes on Screen and Stage Include Number of Star Hits.

FOLLOWING are new bills at Portland's leading photoplay houses today and scheduled for the new week:

Liberty

At the Liberty this morning Manager Paul Noble is presenting an entirely new bill for the early week run, featuring Charles Ray, a favorite in Portland, in "The Busher," his newest picture, and, according to reviewers who have seen the film, one of his best. "The Busher," needless to say, is a baseball story, in which Ray is the "busher," who plays a losing game at the beginning, but who comes back in great shape to win the day for his old home town, and incidentally to make a run home with the girl of his dreams. On the same bill, a Sennett comedy, "Hearts and Flowers," and "Kinograms," the news reel de luxe.

Columbia

Enid Bennett in "The Haunted Bedroom," touted as one of the most interesting and mysterious of all mystery plays, and at the same time a consistent and logical story, is featured on the new bill at the Columbia starting today. Mr. and Mrs. Sydnew Drew in "Squared," is the comedy feature. A final showing of "Fatty" Arbuckle in "A Desert Hero," was given free to kiddies this morning.

Majestic

For the new week starting today the Majestic is featuring Leah Baird, one of the newer stars in the m. p. firmament, in the great Augustus Thomas success "As a Man Thinks," not seen in Portland since the stage version was presented here. A Christie two-reeler, "Rowdy Ann," is an added feature.

Sunset

Manager Cohen of the Sunset is featuring "The Brand," Rex Beach's splendid, virile story of Alaska, at his theatre today for the early part of the new week. "The Brand" is a gripping story of elemental passions. The photoplay was directed by Rex Beach himself, and has his personal O. K.

Globe

Dorothy Gish in probably the best of her successes, "Boots," is featured at the Globe in the new opening today for the week. "Boots" is a story presenting life from a number of its most interesting angles.

STRAND—J. Warren Kerrigan in "One Dollar Bid" is the photoplay feature of the new photoplay and vaudeville bill to open at the Strand Sunday.

HEILIG—Julian Eltinge, female impersonator, and his own company of vaudeville entertainers, will open at the Heilig Sunday evening for a week's engagement. Harvey's minstrels this evening.

BAKER—Last performances of "The Girl He Couldn't Buy" this afternoon and tonight. Next Sunday afternoon the Baker stock company in "The Unkissed Bride."

ALCAZAR—This afternoon, tonight and Sunday night, the Alcazar Musical Comedy company in "Sweethearts." New Monday night, "Flora Bella."

LYRIC—Dillon and Franks in "The Photo Girl" this afternoon and tonight. New Sunday afternoon, "Wanted: A Wife."

PANTAGES—Vaudeville and photoplay serial, Ruth Roland in "The Tiger's Trail." Afternoon and night. Program changes Monday afternoon.

HIPPODROME—Manager Ely announces new vaudeville numbers of merit and photoplay features on the new bill at the Hippodrome, starting Sunday afternoon.

CIRCLE—Motion pictures featuring Elsie Ferguson in "Under the Greenwood Tree." Sunday afternoon and Monday, Douglas Fairbanks in "Arizona."

GUARD NOTES

Captain R. M. Conner is commanding the supply company of the new Third Oregon. Captain Conner was overseas in the United States regular army and was in command of infantry, artillery and engineer unity. He is ably assisted by Sergeant D. J. McGillis, regimental supply sergeant, and Friday night received four experienced recruits. The supply company is the last to be organized of the regimental companies and short notice has been given Captain Conner to have 29 men in line for federal inspection Thursday night. Any good men showing up at the recruiting office on Fifth and Washington streets and offering to enlist in the supply company will be welcome. Veterans with experience are doubly welcome. There are five sergeancies vacant and other noncommissioned offices waiting the right men.

Federal inspection has been ordered for all the national guard units in Portland beginning Tuesday night with companies E, F and G. The headquarters company will be inspected Wednesday evening and the supply and machine gun company Thursday night. If the units come up to the requirements of the U. S. regulations they will be mustered into federal service. Captain Wilson of the U. S. army will be inspecting and mustering officer.

The branch recruiting office for the national guard will be kept open every evening until Thursday night. It is located at Fifth and Washington streets in the Jennings building. With the call for volunteers in the regular army for border duty there is a rumor that national guard units may be called out at any time in case matters get to humming along the Rio Grande. The units best prepared may be called first. Oregon has always been best prepared.

Economics Practice At Home Succeeded By Dean Ava Milam

Oregon Agricultural College, Corvallis, June 21.—Theories learned by students in home economics at the college will be put into practice this summer if suggestions in a letter to the young women by Dean Ava B. Milam are carried out.

"Home economic schools throughout the country are recognising the need of more practice for their students," said Dean Milam. "Skill in cookery, sewing, etc., can only be obtained through practice. I think the plan adopted by some who go into their own homes and persuade their mothers to turn over to them the responsibility of the management of the diet of the family, marketing, planning, preparing and serving the meals is very good. This, I think, should be done with a definite sum of money agreed upon by the mother and the girl. The sewing work, which would come in connection with the household, is also valuable.

Coliseum Will Not Be Built This Year

Lewiston, Idaho, June 21.—No coliseum will be built for the Northwest Livestock show this year, because of the high cost of materials and labor and the uncertainty of affairs. New cattle and sheep barns will be built, costing about $7500.

The Adventures of Jimmy Coon

Jimmy Coon Gets His Dinner

THOSE two Snow Shoe Rabbits led Jimmy Coon and Teddy Possum along the bank of the brook to a place where it widened and made almost a little pond. And here right in the middle of the ice which covered it was a round little hole.

Some time in the winter when the ice and snow are everywhere get your father to take you to a lake or pond. Look around and before long you will find a little round hole just like this one.

"There," said one of the Snow Shoes, "you can find fish through that hole. Make it bigger."

So Jimmy Coon scratched at the hole and broke off little pieces of ice. Very soon he could put his little black hand and arm through the hole.

The water was not so awfully cold as the ice made a blanket for it. But brook water is very cold in summer and Jimmie, in warm weather, often fished for trout.

Of course the noise made by breaking the ice scared off the fish for a time, but soon they came swimming back, right under the hole.

Jimmie Coon was a very skillful fisherman and he pulled out one, then two and three fish.

There was a regular fish dinner and only Jimmy Coon and Teddy Possum ate, because the Rabbits had had their lunch.

My, how they enjoyed that dinner and they didn't have to bother with a fire for they didn't have to cook their fish.

When they had finished there wasn't a bite left.

"This is a nice place to visit," said Jimmy Coon. "Lots to eat and you don't have to bother to hunt it up. These cousins of Peter Rabbit seem to be very nice people, what did he mean when he smiled that time you asked him why he was afraid of Mr. Red Fox?

"I don't know. That was a funny thing and we must watch and see what it means. But what about Peter Rabbit? We must not let anything happen to him, for we told his mother we would bring him home safely."

"Of course we will take care of Peter, but where is he?" They looked all around and no Peter was to be seen.

"Surely Uncle Snow Shoe will take care of him until we get back," said Jimmy Coon.

They looked all around and little Peter was not to be seen.

"I don't know about that, for I noticed that when Mr. Red Fox comes along every one is for himself and Mr. Red Fox usually catches the hindmost."

Jimmy Coon and Teddy Possum would have been horrified if they could have seen what a fix little Peter was in.

Club Members Entertained at Luncheon

Mrs. D. L. Green Host at Her Residence, 1005 East Thirty-Third Street.

By Vella Winner

THE Elberta Forward club met with Mrs. Green, 1005 East Thirty-third street north, Thursday afternoon and finished work on refugee garments.

Mrs. Anna H. Pogue and son, Eugene, of Key West, Fla., were welcomed back in the club. One new member, Mrs. Mackinister, was enrolled. After an impromptu program and delightful luncheon, the club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Feyring at 215 Fargo street, July 3.

Mrs. Russell Catlin entertained Chemeketa chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution of Salem, last Saturday afternoon. In the course of the afternoon the Old Peoples' home was visited and the women rendered a lovely program for the old people. Some of the prettiest selections were the vocal solos by Mrs. H. M. Stiles, the quartet pieces by Mrs. Stiles, Mrs. U. G. Shipley, Mrs. Seymour Jones and Mrs. C. C. Clark; and the trio selections by Mrs. Stiles, Mrs. Clark and Miss Edith Benedict. Light refreshments were served after the program. In the brief business meeting preceeding the visit to the home, Mrs. Ada Wilcox, Miss Jessie U. Cox and Mrs. John W. Harbison were admitted as new members to the organization.

The Overlook Women's Improvement club extends thanks to the Overlook people who so liberally contributed their beautiful roses toward making their part of the floral parade a true representation of the Rose Festival and the Rose City.

The final meeting for the season of the Forest Grove Woman's club was held this week at the home of the president, Mrs. Charles Hines. The affair was in the nature of a picnic luncheon. During the afternoon the women went in a body to the polling place of the school election and cast their votes. Then followed the business session. The club has had an active year and completed its work with a small balance in the treasury. The civics committee is one of the active departments and reported that the expensive shrubbery recently purchased for the Central school is now growing satisfactorily. The closing ceremony was the turning over of the gavel by Mrs. Hines to Mrs. Whitehouse, the president elect.

FRATERNAL NOTES

The Catholic Order of Foresters of Portland through the Portland League of Foresters will entertain 100 visiting brothers this evening from outside points. The visitors will be received at Gregory hall, Milwaukie and Center streets, by officers and members of the order in Portland and will be extended hospitality in every form. Milton A. Miller will extend the address of welcome. A supper will be served at Gregory hall. Arrangements have been made for the visitors to be entertained at homes of members for the night. Sunday morning high mass will be attended and immediately after an auto excursion over the Columbia river highway will be given, with lunch at Eagle creek. Members from Stayton, Salem, Woodburn, Silverton, Mount Angel, Gervais and other places will attend. Oscar Horne, chairman of the reception committee, has charge of arrangements.

Friday night Rose City chapter, Order Eastern Star, was entertained at cards and refreshments served by the past worthy matrons, and they were assisted by the past worthy patrons. The dining room at the Masonic temple was decorated and the slices of ice cream under the deft slicing of Clyde Evans were of unusual thickness. Mrs. Edith Birney is worthy matron and Oscar M. Smith worthy patron of the chapter.

The annual Elks' picnic at Estacada is one of the features of summer. It will be held tomorrow. There will be sports, special stunts, surprises and games of all kinds. There will be a frontier canyon specialty that it is predicted will almost put the Pendleton round-up in the shade. Special trains will be run from East Morrison and East Water street, the first leaving at 9:15 a. m. All Elks, their families, their friends and neighbors and everybody else is invited. The round trip will be $1.

Thursday night Kirkpatrick Council, Knights and Ladies of Security, visited Vancouver council and conferred the work on a class of 49. A banquet was served afterwards to over 300 members and guests.

Friday night Industry lodge A. O. U. W., gave a dance in K. of P. hall that was well attended and greatly enjoyed by the young people and some of the "young folks" were gray-headed.

Washington Lodge, A. F. & A. M., is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary at Gladstone Park this afternoon and evening. A special train carrying members and their families and guests left on the Oregon City line at 1:30 p. m. A program of speeches and sports will be given. Supper will be served on the grounds. The lodge has more than 1000 members. It is expected that Judge M. C. George, who joined the lodge in 1872, will attend.

Freedom of Money For Loans to Home Builders Planned

Washington, June 21.—(I. N. S.)—With the United States short nearly a million homes, bills were pending today in the senate and house, having for their purpose a plan to make more liquid the assets of the building and loan associations of the country, that their money may be loaned more freely to home builders.

The department of labor, which is behind the plan, has prepared a federal building loan bill which was presented in the house of representatives by Representative Nolan of California. Under it the government is required to supervise, but not to supply any capital or to purchase any bonds.

LOUIS HART, athlete and poseur, featured on the bill to open Sunday at Hippodrome.

THE Stroller notices

THAT ex-army boys seem to have difficulty in striking a stride to conform with that of their hobble-skirted companions.

That today is the longest day of the year.

That you'd better make the most of it.

That we can pardon the pride of the home gardeners who are eating green peas and new potatoes out of their own garden.

That we're going to invite you all over to the house about July 1 when we expect to set our first home grown feast.

That The Journal business office is going to lose one of its charming young women.

That he's a hard hearted man who can't get a thrill out of the jazzing of a minstrel band.

That garden hose costs more this summer than it did last summer.

That you can ask a man to drink but he doesn't have to take it.

Minstrels Are Entertainers Of Merit

Clarence Powell and Frank Kirk There With Comedy and Harmonious Offerings.

By S. R. Jr.

WE HAD no yearning or burning desire to see Harvey's oldtime negro minstrel show until we heard the rolling of the drum and the moan of the trombone and saw the colored boys go marching by in gay silks and satins and high hats and canes and spats in the grand high-noon parade.

Then we felt ourselves slipping and the next thing we knew Fred Bailey was handing us a couple of tickets through the wicket at the Heilig and telling us that Frank Kirk and his old song stunt, "The Little Red Caboose Behind the Train," or words to that effect, was alone going to be worth the price of admission. We'll say that it was. Besides doing his "caboose" trick, in which he apparently swallows a lighted cigar, Kirk drags melody out of a number of musical instruments of his own make and gives an imitation of a calliope that beats the calliope itself. Kirk has been doing minstrelsy for the last 25 or 30 years, and why Martin Beck hasn't grabbed him off long before this we can't understand.

Clarence Powell, a big comedian, makes a hit with his song of local color takeoffs. Emmett Moss has a voice that starts down in his feet, and he uses it effectively in singing "The Big Bass Viol" and "Old Black Joe." Other vocalists well received are Duke Anderson, Irvy Richardson, Slim Austin, Lawrence Baker, Charlie Beechum, Josie Gardner, Will Merritt, Nora Robinson and Johnella Gay, and the comedy four, Merritt, Anderson, Beechum and Moss, stopped the show.

The Harvey aggregation is just what it professes to be—an oldtime minstrel show—with no splurge of setting or fancy flubdubs, but some mighty entertaining colored singers and dancers—and when the colored folk are in the mood and croon and hum a plantation tune, what can beat it for melody?

Last night's audience, including a large representation of both the black and white races, was enthusiastic in its reception of the minstrels.

The show goes on this afternoon and this evening.

"Big Bill" Devery Is Dead

New York, June 21.—(I. N. S.)—William (Big Bill) Devery, New York's first titular chief of police and a former power in Tammany hall, is dead today at his home at Far Rockaway, following an apoplectic stroke.

DRESS

by Anne Rittenhouse

(Copyright, 1919, McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

MOST people have a good word to say for the sweater, but a constant demand for it irritates the dressmakers.

They ask the public why it is not more susceptible of change. They claim that there are various forms of garments more commendable.

They point to the fact that the loose, knitted sweater tied around the middle with a sash of its own kind, serves only for the informal hours of life, while a more ornamental garment spreads its services over days and nights in and out of town.

Such arguing makes a strong appeal to the public. The majority of women seem to have decided on the more fanciful garment for summer usage, but the minority have discarded the sweater and lead the way toward capes, sport capes and ornamental sweaters.

Sport cape of black and white checked wool combined with white wool and belted with scarlet leather fastened over scarlet buttons at each side. The collar is a muffler, with one end tucked in under the chin.

The latter have been offered as a stimulation to the appetite of those who insist upon knitted things. They are quite attractive, with their fronts that warp about the waist and tie in back, and their immense collars and cuffs of white or colored filet woolen lace.

The woman who likes a variety of top garments to serve many temperatures, usually indulges in the extravagance of buying one of each kind that is offered.

There are women who do this to their regret, but experience does not teach them a lesson. Women on moderate incomes own from eight to 12 types of top garments, half of which they do not need. The collection of capes, sweaters and sport capes is a mania with certain women. They will rely on one gown to take them through the season and purchase a half dozen garments to go over it.

These women are the delight of the dressmakers and shops because they buy whatever is offered in the name of novelty.

NEW KIND OF CAPE

We know that the tight fitting velveteen sport coat in lemon yellow is very smart; we have reached the conclusion that the ornamental, filet lace drawn work sweater is an admirable substitute for the informal one; we have indulged in an orgy of cape buying to serve all the waking hours; but everyone does not know about the appearance of an odd, short cape that is being exploited in smart country clothes.

The sketch shows it as it is worn.

The material is soft wool in black and white check, so soft that it might have grown on a baby lamb. A waistcoat, a cape and a muffler are combined to make one garment.

The waistcoat is of dead white wool bordered with two immense pockets of black and white wool and girdled with two bands of supple red leather caught with a button at each side. There is a belt that goes around the back which joins itself to the sides of the waist coat in order to keep it in place.

The cape part is of the black and white checked wool, floating loosely over the arms, a trifle shorter in front than in back.

THE MUFFLER COLLAR

The muffler is what some person has unpleasantly called a boa-constrictor collar. The unpleasantness consists in the striking resemblance between this huge, coiled snake in a cage at the zoo and this huge, coiled, checked collar that tucks its head into its folds just under one ear.

Centenary Draws 27,000 Methodists At Opening Session

Columbus, Ohio, June 21.—(I. N. S.)—More than 27,000 people attended the opening of the Methodist centenary and thousands of visitors arrived today. The great exhibition is beyond all expectations, visitors say.

Among the speakers today were Bishop W. F. Anderson, Cincinnati; Bishop H. C. Stuntz of Asia, Dr. Ralph Cushman and Chief Justice Hugh L. Nichols of the Ohio supreme court. The Rainbow band and the famous Centenary Trombone band will give concerts.

Coquille Achieves Salvation Quota in Day With Elks' Aid

Marshfield, June 21.—Coquille was the first city in Coos county to meet its quota of $900 in the Salvation Army drive, which is being conducted by the Marshfield lodge of Elks.

The quota was raised in one day.

The lodge is also having a membership drive. There are 350 members in the Marshfield lodge and an effort will be made to increase the number to 500 before starting on the building of a new home.

Garden Hints

BY SHEBA CHILDS HARGREAVES (OF PORTLAND)

Level cultivation is best for potatoes. About this time of year the soil begins to dry out and hills dry faster than level surfaces.

If young trees set this spring show a tendency to die back, cut off the dead portions and be sure the soil is moist clear down. Trees set in the fall stand a better chance of surviving the first season than those set in the spring.

If the pole beans are beginning to throw up climbers it is high time they were given poles to climb on. Much time is lost by lack of attention to these little details. Some practical gardeners set the poles in place when they plant their beans.

The enthusiastic amateur has probably planted too many perennials in his borders. If they are beginning to crowd he will have to pull up the ones he cares the least about. This hurts, of course, but crowding means thin, sickly plants with very few blooms.

Do not allow the lilies to dry out before or during the blooming season. If low growing plants have not filled the bed, mulch with lawn clippings, so that the sun will not strike the soil. Lower leaves turning yellow is an indication of lack of water, which will make for small flowers as well as shortening the period of bloom.

AMUSEMENTS

THE OAKS AMUSEMENT PARK

CHAT NO. 22

Sunday is the big day of the week at THE OAKS. Not only do we receive great throngs of pleasure-loving visitors on Sunday, but we entertain them with the very best refined amusement that money can bring to Portland.

On Sunday work has paused and a spirit of freedom exists in every patron of THE OAKS.

They find great delight in the cool shade of the great trees; they find beauty in the flowers that make the park one of the wonder spots of the city; they find entertainment along the Trail.

And on Sunday of each week our patrons flock into the big park auditorium for the two daily performances of the famous Armstrong Folly company, with its beautiful chorus of Winter Garden runway girls.

There patrons will find the best in musical comedy successes. They find music and humor of a higher order than any other obtainable in Portland at any price—and they find it free of cost.
