Contracting Growers in Marion County Restrained From Selling Berries to Higher Bidders

INJUNCTION PENDING HERE

Companies Ask That Valley Canning Company and A. Rupert Be Made to Abide by Contracts

The first point was scored Saturday by the Salem-King company and the Phez company in their combined fight against contracting growers of Willamette valley to restrain the latter from disregarding their contracts when higher prices are offered them for their loganberries by the A. Rupert company.

A similar injunction is pending in the circuit court here, filed by the Salem-King company against the Valley Canning company and the A. Rupert company, asking that the defendants be prohibited from taking berries from growers under contract with the Salem-King company or soliciting business among growers of contracted crops.

LOW PRICE CAUSE

"Much trouble has been encountered in the Willamette valley this spring because of the upward trend of prices and the fact that most crops had been contracted for in advance at a price far under the quotations today," said P. W. Cookingham, who represented the Salem-King company in filing the injunction here.

Following the action taken here Saturday Mr. Cookingham called up Salem where, he says, he is confident the court had ordered the Salem Fruit union to deliver to the Phez company the full amount of berries contracted for, no matter where they got them. This contract with the Phez company amounts to 1200 tons.

ACTION HELD NECESSARY

Mr. Cookingham says that these procedures were necessary because of the determination to continue on this tack despite the fact that the Phez company announced that it would voluntarily give a bonus covering the difference in prices between their contract and the prevailing prices.

Portland Man Invents Phonograph With Human Tone

"Tin" Sound of Phonograph is Eliminated by "Cremona"

Like all great inventions the answer is very simple when found out. Mr. C. Guy Wakefield describes his solution of the long-sought problem of making a phonograph reproduce the voice of an artist or the piece of music exactly like the original as a "happy accident." Regardless of what makes the difference, the result is wonderful. They say "you can't satisfy everyone," but in this phonograph, so far, we have proved that statement false. We have played the Wonder Cremona machine for hundreds of
