

SOUTH AMERICA IS EAGER FOR TRADE

Merchants Will Continue to Look to This Country for Supplies, Says Trade Commissioner.

Merchants of South America are going to continue to look to the United States for supplies because of the advantage of credit and better prices they can obtain in this country. Portland has the supplies to ship that are most needed in the west coast countries of the southern continent and should be able to build up a remunerative trade with Latin America.

This message was given to Portland merchants, shippers and exporters who conferred Wednesday with William Wallace Ewing, trade commissioner of the department of commerce, in Portland today on his return to America after spending two years and four months studying the markets in South America and specializing on the market for building materials and construction machinery. He arrived from San Francisco on invitation of the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

"During the war merchants of various countries in South America who secured their supplies from the United States were obliged to meet shorter terms," said Commissioner Ewing. "Much has been written about these merchants returning to their old source of supplies after the war-time readjustment. From my observations I believe many will continue to purchase in the United States because of the lessons they learned from securing better prices incident to shorter terms of credit."

"The best merchants in the Latin countries are beginning to realize the advantage of these shorter terms as is indicated in the recent survey of credits made by a large manufacturing concern in the East which had been supplying the southern trade during the war. The report shows that during the last year and a half 60 per cent of the business was done on a cash basis, 25 per cent on short terms of credit and the remainder is seeking the old conditions."

Reports have been prepared by Ewing covering commercial conditions in Cuba, Venezuela, Colombia and Chile, Peru and Ecuador. These reports in addition cover the economic aspect, climatic and other conditions and summarize the possibilities offered in each country investigated.

In speaking of trade possibilities with the Columbia river district, Ewing said that flour and lumber are two of the most needed articles in the west coast countries and urged merchants with whom he conferred to investigate the possibilities of the district he has just studied. Conferences were continued until 6 o'clock this evening at the Chamber of Commerce. The commissioner will leave for Washington tonight.

Surely a Becoming Frock Is the First Fall Thought!

Quaint and pretty, indeed, are the models of tricotine, serge and satin that we are showing even though the season be early. The Russian Blouse is especially featured while the tight basque lends a contrast in styles. A clever model of fine French serge has a dainty embroidery batiste vest edged with bright green and finished with a collar of Astrakhan. Tricotines are distinctively plain or embroidered and braided—while buttons, too, played a big part in trimming. Satins are richer than ever this season—many are softened with a touch of Georgette.
