David Belasco May Produce No More

Master Craftsman of Stage Sees Chaos Ahead if Actors' Equity Wins Suits.

DAVID BELASCO, at the close of the first week of the actors' strike, announced that he would never again produce a play if the Actors' Equity association succeeded in its efforts to break the contracts existing between producers and players in a flight, the real object of which, Mr. Belasco asserts, is to establish the "closed shop."

Mr. Belasco's comments on the situation as given the New York Telegraph, follow: "Granted that we are all wrong, suppose we concede at once that these children of the stage, who are being misled, should have everything they demand, which they virtually have already, what assurance can managers have that another whim of some professional troublemaker and self-centered leader will not again break faith."

WHAT WILL HAPPEN?

"Is it to be a fact that individual contracts can be broken at the command of one or several men? If so, then what will become of the business world? What is the value of an agreement? What is the value of a pledge, a vow?"

"How can I or any other producer be sure that some grievance won't be immediately born in the minds of these children of impulse who are under a heavy hand to obey the council of the so-called Actors' Equity association, right or wrong? Equity! The very word has been traduced. It has lost its meaning to me and to every producer or director."

"If, by any unexpected calamity, our individual contracts made months ago for the approaching season should be upheld, how can we go on? If the closed shop becomes a reality, I will never produce again."

"If the actors involved in the present strike will send representatives to us whom we can trust there will be no more trouble. There must be mutual confidence if we are to get the profession back to its romantic, idealism, dignity and honesty of one week ago."

PROFESSION IS INTANGIBLE

"Abhorring each other, how can we think we are going to succeed? We cannot. Ours is a profession of intense and sympathetic temperamental, less tangible than a dream, highly strung and emotional, the dearest and best and most bohemianlike people in the world, all of whom would give his or her life blood to any just cause. Why not do the same for each other? It breaks my heart to see the boys and girls of our great profession fighting like a mob. We are artists first, last and always, and we must have freedom to do our work in the same spirit. We cannot govern their individualities, nor set to rules their temperaments, their emotions, their brains. They must be free and independent and individual as the painter, the poet or the novelist."

"If this condition cannot continue then I shall never again produce a play. If we cannot go on in the unfettered way, then let us go and be honored business men and honest laborers."

Cucumbers Don't Hurt 'Tummy' But Beware of Stone Steps

Come on, you cucumber. Oh, you green apple. Slandered and maligned as you have been just because somewhere off in the dim past you were blamed for midsummer-ills affecting the stomach, at last comes your champion. He is none other than Dr. Louis R. Weismiller, physical director of the West Side Y. New York. It would seem that a new era is opening for cucumbers, green apples, green corn, watermelon, etc., which all we cautious ones eat with more or less trepidation, and against too free indulgence in which we warn the youngsters, for "Doc" says: "Jokesmiths and hoary traditions have got these products of the soil in bad. They are hereafter to be held blameless. It's not what you eat but what you do afterward that causes the trouble. "Summer tourists and vacationists should learn not to flout Nature while communing with her. She doesn't like flouting more than any other dame. Now, while you are out at the farm, it is perfectly natural for you to pick up a green apple on your wanderings. The tartness is delightful when one is hot and thirsty; it is healthful, too, unless you walk over to the rock in the shade and sit down to eat it. It is picturesque and rocks to sit on are not numerous on Broadway—fortunately. It is the rock, not the green apple, which is responsible for many a tummyache, for a cool rock and a green apple are bad in combination. The rock chills the body and arrests digestion and there is trouble. The apple didn't do it. "Likewise sitting or supper on stone or brick porch or steps will do the same thing, and it is well to bear in mind that it is the after chilling which is harmful. Another peril is in the matter of dress. Summer outings call for light, even flimsy clothing. That is all right when it is warm or when exercising, but the breeze that blows may chill one unduly before it is noticed. These August evenings the air chills quickly after sunset and one should not sit around outdoors or venture far abroad without wraps. The popular sweater saves many a pain and, in fact, one sweater over your chest (and abdomen) is worth two bottles of Jamaica ginger in the medicine chest."

General Wood Best Man at Wedding of Colonel McConnell

Chicago, Aug. 21.—(U. P.)—Major General Leonard Wood was best man at the wedding of a comrade fighting man here last night. Out at Camp Funston, Kan., a year ago, Colonel F. J. McConnell, chief of staff at the cantonment, met Miss Katherine Farrell of Wilkesbarre, Pa., who had volunteered for war work as a tylist. Both wanted to go overseas. So they kind of worked in sympathy. Last night the couple were married at St. Ambrose's church here. Wood and McConnell had campaigned together in the Philippines. THE Stroller notices

THAT we've just noticed the nice new concrete step leading from the sidewalk to the crossing on the church corner at Broadway at Yamhill.

That often when the plank step was there we used to sit in our window and laugh the efforts of pedestrians to pick up a nickel or a smooth dime that happy boys had nailed down.

That one by one our old forms of amusement are falling before the march of progress.

That some men think they have to smoke a cigarette before they can eat their breakfast.

That our office has a new cat. That it finds a snug refuge in the society editor's sweater.

That our last office cat disappeared one morning after the boss inadvertently sat on it.

That when the shades of evening are falling some kiddies are quite sure they can see an elephant taking a bath in the Mount Tabor reservoir.

That it has come to pass that it's just about as cheap to pay rent as it is to move.

That mother's voice sounds natural as ever even over a thousand miles of telephone wire.

That where there's a will there's a way to be a law suit.

That our friend the tailor has an idea that we're going to need a new overcoat before very long.

That he's right.

Thanks Again, Yank Dear Stroller: Say, did you see that notice in the Journal of August 18, signed U. S.?

Well, them's just my sentiments, Mister.

YOUR OLD YANK FRIEND, Whaddya Mean, "Coincidence?" Baker, Or., Aug. 19.

Dear Stroller: We have been worried at the Stroller's absence for the past two weeks and wondered if the old typewriter had worn out.

The only sport we exiles from Portland have here in Baker is reading the Stroller column, so for the love of Mike don't vacation too often.

The Stroller's vacation must have been a real pleasant one, but we wondered if he didn't notice anything else at Seaside but the rare form of the Girl With the Green Eyes. It seems a strange coincidence that she should be there at the same time. TEE EXILES.

FRATERNAL NOTES

Ivanhoe lodge, Knights of Pythias, conferred the degree of Knight upon a class of nine Tuesday evening. The lodge would like to take a vacation, but is unable to do so. Husband of Ann Swinburne Dies At Santa Barbara

Telegraphic information received in Portland tells of the death at Santa Barbara, Cal., Wednesday morning, of Rudolph Schirmer, wealthy music publisher and husband of Miss Ann Ditchburn of Portland, recognized beauty of the stage, known professionally as Ann Swinburne. Mrs. Schirmer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ditchburn, Mr. Ditchburn being a Portland attorney. Schirmer's death was due to heart trouble, from which he had suffered for a number of years. He was manager of the music publishing house of G. Schirmer & Co., nationally known, and was a trustee of Princeton university. He was wealthy and maintained a large home and estate at Santa Barbara. Miss Ditchburn married Schirmer about five years ago in San Francisco. A boy was born to them two weeks ago.

The Adventures of Jimmy Coon

Cousin Bruin Eats Honey

WILSON Aunt Matilda Unruh had pushed those little cubs ahead of her into the woods and was quite out of sight. Cousin Bruin and his little friends came to the hollow tree. Cousin Bruin has fine appetite, for he had seen Aunt Matilda and her little cubs eating that sweet honey, and he felt that he would die if he didn't have some, too.

So he thrust his great paw into that hollow tree and drew it forth dripping with honey, and Cousin Bruin wasn't very particular and anyone could see that he ate many bees with their honey. You would have been astonished if you could have seen those angry bees swarming around Cousin Bruin's head.

There seemed to be thousands or millions of angry bees. Teddy Possum and Jimmy Coon ate little pieces of honey-comb that dropped from Cousin Bruin's paws, but a swarm of these angry bees settled on Jimmy Coon's nose he ran to the brook and stuck his poor nose in the mud.

Teddy Possum had his tail stung, too, and he had to run to the brook for a little mud plaster and tie it on Teddy's tail.

"I don't care so much about honey this time of the year," said Jimmy Coon; "it doesn't seem to agree with me very well."

"I don't like honey at all," said Teddy Possum; "it doesn't seem to agree with me, either."

Those two rascals sat on the bank of the brook in the soft mud, nursing their sores and watching Cousin Bruin gorging himself with sweet honey.

When time Cousin Bruin put his huge paw into that nest of the honey bees, and he didn't stop until there was not a bit of honey left. The way those angry bees swarmed over Cousin Bruin was a caution. You would have been sorry for those poor little bees—all their

AVIATION NOTES

A plane belonging to the Ace Aircraft corporation and piloted by Archie Roth, formerly in the service overseas, will add a touch of interest to the Pendleton Round-Up this year. In the interval between thrilling the crowds Lieutenant Roth will take up passengers and give all those who wish a taste of how they will travel with the whole family in about 15 years. After the round-up the plane will make a tour of the state, stopping at La Grande, Baker, Ontario and Prineville.

There are now six planes operating commercially in Oregon besides the eight machines working on the Pendleton Round-Up this year. The place of the airplane in civilian life is every day becoming more established, and its development along certain lines such as postal work, passenger service and forest patrol, is already far advanced. Two months ago there was only one plane in the state. Now there are 14, and plans are in progress to have more here soon.

Lieutenant Omar C. Locklear, who at Atlantic City first achieved the stunt of passing from one airplane to another while both machines were in flight, and who has since made the transfer more than 100 times, has arrived at Los Angeles, to apply to moving picture features the performance he undertook first as aeronautic experiments. In addition to passing from one plane to another, he climbs all over the machines while they are in flight, stands up on the wings, balances on the frame or hangs below the body by his hands or heels. A motion picture feature has been written especially to utilize his stunt ability, and is now under production at Universal City.

Acting Governor Lewis F. Hart has announced his intention of calling a special session of the legislature this winter.
