

13 AGAIN PROVES LUCKY NUMBER FOR PRESIDENT WILSON

Cheers and Enthusiasm Received From People of Puget Sound Most Enthusiastic of His Trip.

Says Leaders of Opposition Party Were Among the First to Advocate a League of Nations.

By Jay Jerome Williams
Seattle, Sept. 13.—The Pacific coast today gave President Wilson a great welcome.

"Thirteen" is his lucky number, and it surely served him in good stead on this date. Thousands of people crowded the streets of this city this afternoon and Tacoma this morning, to catch a glimpse of the president; and the cheers they gave him were the most prolonged and enthusiastic of the trip.

Once more the president touched on politics in driving home his arguments on behalf of peace treaty and League of Nations. He charged that "Party passion" had actuated some men in the fight against the league and he expressed the hope that no one who heard him would "determine his opinion with the thought that there is an election in 1920."

"I am saying these things," he declared, "because I want to read the riot act to anyone who tries to introduce politics in this matter."

The president also made a new departure in his speechmaking. He disassociated himself from the chief leadership in the fight for the league and gave credit to its other sponsors, calling them by name for the first time on the trip.

He mentioned former President Taft and George W. Wickersham, who was attorney general under Taft. He said that Mr. Wickersham had gone to Paris as an avowed opponent of the league and that before he left he was "absolutely converted to it."

"I need not tell you he conspicuously fine work Mr. Taft is doing in the same cause," added the president.

This was a grand and glorious day for the president. He found Seattle "crowded to the guards" and the streets ablaze with a riot of color. The fleet is here and this afternoon he reviewed it.

GUNS BOOM WELCOME

At Tacoma he was welcomed into the town to the tune of a salute of 21 guns fired from the army, where he spoke, and whose deep throated roars shattered windows for blocks around.

When the presidential party drew into Tacoma, it looked as though the president had fallen heir to another frosty reception. Few people were at the station, few were on the streets. The party was taken for a long motor ride and then a descent was begun from the hill that forms the crest of the city. Suddenly the president's car was shot into an open space and Tacoma unfolded one of the most impressive spectacles of the journey.

An immense concrete stadium, set in a natural amphitheatre of hills lay before him and in it stood nearly 30,000 persons. The majority of them were school children bearing flags, and the cry of welcome they gave Mr. and Mrs. Wilson boomed against the neighboring hillsides and carried its echo far out over the hazy waters of Puget Sound.

A band blared forth the national anthem and "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung with religious fervor by the immense assemblage.

TALKS TO CHILDREN

The president appeared much affected as he stood with bared head and later received a parchment prayer of thanks from a little Polish girl who darted from the crowd.

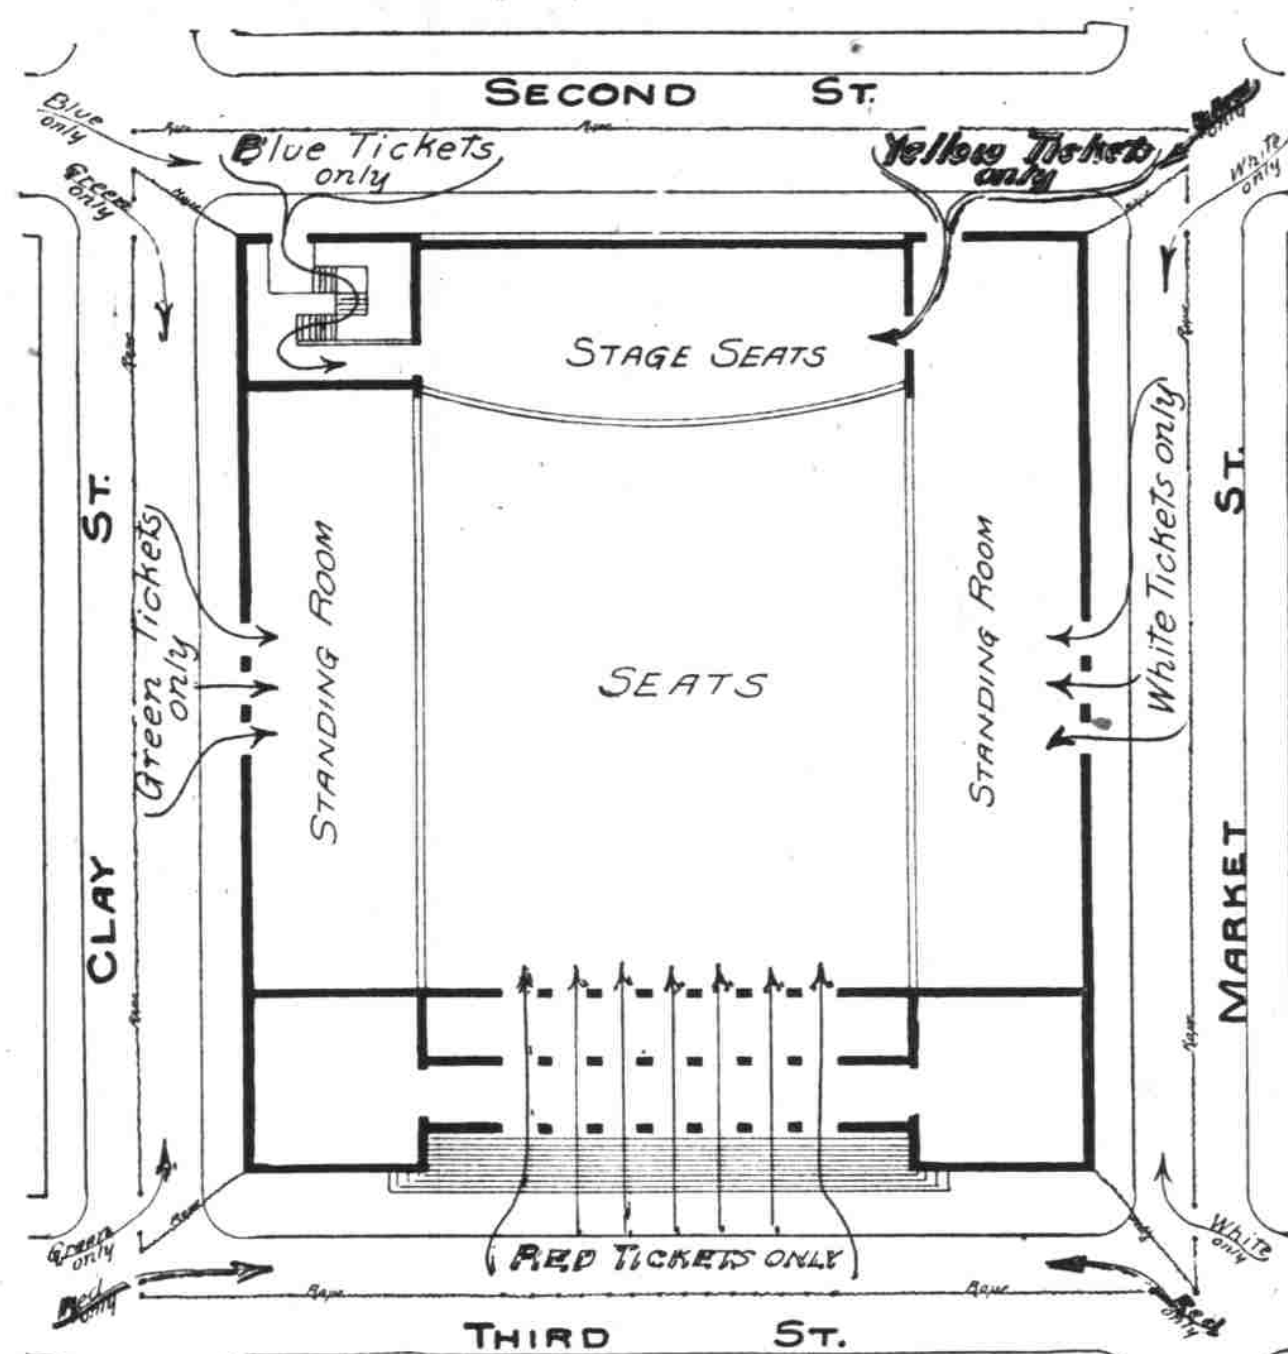

He mounted the grandstand and made a short speech.

"My fellow countrymen," he declared, "we are making decisions now which mean much more to the school children than they mean to us."

Tacoma's greeting must have warmed the president's heart, for he "unlimbered" before his audience to a new extent, told funny stories, and appeared to enjoy every minute of this fulsome day.

There was one humorous feature of the day which emphasized the president's

KEY TO AUDITORIUM SEATING PLAN

Holders of tickets for the Auditorium Monday night should observe provisions for admittance, as different colored tickets are honored only at designated entrances. For example, diagram shows that red tickets will be honored only at main entrance on Third street. The green tickets are good for standing room only and must be presented at the Clay street entrance. White tickets are good for standing room only with entrance on the Market street side of the building. Holders of blue stage tickets will be admitted through the north stage entrance on Second street, while yellow stage tickets will admit only at the south stage entrance on Second. Ropes, as indicated on the chart, show how to gain access to the various entrances.

happy state of mind better than ever before.

It has been his custom in speaking of the League of Nations to explain it in the language of the insurance agent. Several days ago he mentioned it as a 10 per cent insurance against war. In another speech he termed it a 50 per cent insurance, a little later it was a 90 per cent insurance, then a 95 per cent insurance, and today he had this to say about it:

"It is a 98 per cent insurance against war."

USES AD SLOGAN

He went even further than this. He appropriated the advertising slogan of a well known insurance concern and termed the league "as strong as the rock of Gibraltar."

The president went direct to the Army from the Stadium and found the door through which he and his party were to enter, locked and bolted.

"First time in my life I ever knew a president to be locked out of any place," said a man in the crowd.

"It isn't natural after the welcome we gave you," shouted another.

The president laughed at these sallies and laughed again when the key to the door was finally produced.

He presented his argument for the treaty today in slightly different fashion. He began by reading the concluding paragraph of his message to congress which brought about America's entrance into the war.

"That is what we started out on," he said. "Shall we now falter?"

There were cries of "No, no."

PICTURES COST OF WAR

Then he told of the cost of the war in lives and dollars. He read the figures slowly and distinctly, and explained that every minute of the struggle cost the United States $1,000,000 an hour night and day. The total deaths, he said, were 7,450,000, or more than the deaths in every war which occurred from 1793 to 1916.

"These are terrible facts," he continued. "I came out to ascertain whether or not the country has forgotten them and I have found that it has not. The country has not forgotten them and it will never permit any men, standing in the way of the fulfillment of our pledges, to forget them."

TELLS SOME JOKES
"I look at the little children along the way with almost tears in my eyes because I feel that my mission is to save them." He explained that the Montana lads had called him "Woody," and, by the way, he said, "I don't object to that

ADVICE from one whose competence comes through the selling of clothes

If the clothes you are wearing, or those you have hanging in the closet at home, can be cleaned, patched and pressed without detriment to your good appearance, wear them!

Clothes are high in price; you owe it to yourself to get all the service from them that you can. Not to the extent of being shabby, but within reason. A patched garment is not a disgrace—it is frequently evidence of thrift and economy!

If you must buy clothes, I have clothes to sell. I believe that you will be best served here, because I sell my clothes as moderately as quality, will permit; my label, too, which appears on every garment, is an insurance policy which guarantees satisfactory service or your money back. You take no chances with clothes like these.

Don't buy unless you must, but if you do buy, buy quality.

D'ANNUNZIO LEADS TROOPS INTO FIUME

Latest Development in Dispute Between Italy and Jugo-Slavia Over Adriatic Possessions.

Rome, Sept. 13.—(I. N. S.)—Gabriele D'Annunzio, former aviator in the Italian naval air service, has arrived at Fiume at the head of armed bands of men. It was officially announced here today. The government is taking energetic steps to check any rash movement.

(The move to occupy Fiume with armed troops is the latest development in the dispute between Italy and Jugo-Slavia involving the possession of Adriatic territory. D'Annunzio was one of the leaders of the war party in Italy before that country entered the conflict and it was largely through the efforts of a group of fiery orators, headed by him, that the nation joined the entente in arms.)

On Own Responsibility

Paris, Sept. 13.—(I. N. S.)—Headed by Gabriele D'Annunzio, famous poet-soldier, detachments of Italian grenadiers have marched on Fiume with a view to occupying the town, according to advices from Rome today. The dispatches indicated that the troops and their leader had acted on their own responsibility. The Italian government has ordered all demonstrations to stop and is making an inquiry.

If it's a name and not a description," To explain the difficulty of getting away with the truth, the president told another story. He told how a distinguished South Carolina lawyer, a gentleman of the old school, was "cussed out" by his client when the latter's case was decided against him. He wholed the lawyer with any number of epithets, all of which he took in silence. Finally he called his attorney a federalist and the other promptly knocked him down.

"Well, why did you knock him down for that?" asked one of the attorney's friends. "He said worse things."

"Yes," said the lawyer, according to the president, "but damn him, that was the truth."
