

SENATE DEFEAT OF LEAGUE FOES PLEASES BRITISH

Tension Over Doubt in English Official Circles on Shantung Amendment Greatly Relieved.

LONDON PAPERS COMMENT

Efforts to Wreck Peace Treaty Prove More Noisy Than Formidable, It is Stated.

London, Oct. 10.—(U. P.)—The last fears of British officialdom that the United States would repudiate the peace treaty appeared today to have been dispelled by rejection of the Shantung amendment. In official quarters, as well as in a section of the press, this is accepted as final proof of the administration's strength. Adoption of the covenant, in the view of the sentiment here, is virtually assured.

Declaring that the vote on Shantung was satisfactory, the Daily News says the fate of a further amendment, eliminating the Shantung clause altogether, is immaterial.

"If America prefers to disassociate herself from that particular provision, no serious harm will be done," the paper says. "It is of first importance that the American representatives be in their places the day the League of Nations starts active work."

"Next to the treaty ratification the most important question is America's decision with regard to mandates. The hope of a favorable answer will not be dismissed until an unfavorable answer is given definitely."

An editorial in the Pall Mall Gazette reflects general relief, saying: "Attempts to wreck the treaty upon still greater issues may similarly prove less formidable than noisy."

An official of the foreign office declared: "Coming as a climax to a series of Wilson victories, small but apparently cumulatively to the administration's prestige, the senate vote seems to clinch the outcome. It has entirely removed the last vestige of earlier apprehension in official circles over America's intentions."

British officials believe the handling of Shantung by the League of Nations will be assumed only after the settlement of Fiume, which will be the first test of the league's efficiency. If the league succeeds in Fiume, it is believed it will inspire sufficient confidence to justify a second trust.

EMPLOYER AND LABOR BOTH YIELD

on the one hand and the right of an individual or group of individuals to recognition as a separate and distinct unit apart from the unions themselves was emphasized.

EMPLOYERS OFFER ARGUMENT
Therefore, the employers argue that if the individual has a right to refrain from entering a union and to make an individual agreement with his employer, so has a group of individuals organized perhaps in a shop industrial council. And on their part the employers steadfastly maintain that the right granted to an employer to deal separately with a non-member of a union also carries with it the right to bargain with a group in his shop, and the refusal to deal either with a shop council or a trade union or both.

HITCH OVER OUTSIDE INFLUENCES
Eventually this point will be compromised with the understanding that employers are obliged to deal with any organization of their employees, whether it be a shop council or a trade union. It is on the introduction of influences outside the shop that the hitch comes. The labor leaders claim the workers in any plant can bring outside representatives such as trade union officials immediately. The employers would prefer to deal directly with their own men. The compromise plan which is being discussed would provide for industry councils similar to those provided in the Whitley plan in England, but would not permit the calling in of outside representatives until an absolute disagreement had arisen between the employer and his employees and after certain agreed upon processes of adjustment had been exhausted.

Thus the labor union officials would come in as a sort of mediating influence gradually until in the case of an absolute disagreement the employer would be able to leave their case to the trade union officials to work out. The responsibility of the employer to his shop would be maintained, and the contract between employer and employee would be unimpaired by an outside influence should there, of course, be no objection to affiliation with labor unions outside and to the exchange of information about shop conditions and wages. On the other hand, the employer would reap his men and arrange schedules of wages and hours and seek to obtain an agreement without the vexatious interference of the tactless walking delegate.

WALKING DELEGATE DISTUSTED
There are no doubt tactful walking delegates and reasonable labor leaders, but the employers claim these are more apt to be found higher up in labor circles and not in the locals and districts. They are seeking to thrust out their differences with their men and provide machinery for adjudication and their in the event of disagreement to bring in the higher officials of the unions.

Labor probably would not agree to such a process at the outset, but unless the American Federation of Labor wishes to take the responsibility for breaking up the conference it is unlikely there will be serious objection to an agreement on the absolute right to organize in trade unions or shop councils as the employees themselves may determine.

BOTH HATE I. W. W.
The labor men think that if the right is made too general and includes the privilege of organizing "into any lawful associations whatsoever," this would be a tacit recognition of the I. W. W., but if the employers want to take that chance, the feeling is that the labor group ought not to worry for the fondness on the part of each for the I. W. W. is thus far the signal point of mutual understanding. So many will surely bring the factions closer together. Labor is not going to break up the conference unless it is absolutely sure that the employers mean to make no concessions whatsoever. But the tactics of the latter from Thursday to Friday reveal that they are as anxious to get an agreement with labor and keep the conference in session as the labor group itself.

Labor probably would not agree to such a process at the outset, but unless the American Federation of Labor wishes to take the responsibility for breaking up the conference it is unlikely there will be serious objection to an agreement on the absolute right to organize in trade unions or shop councils as the employees themselves may determine.

MISSION SCHOOL WORK PLAN OF LOCAL CHURCHES

Educational campaign to Start Soon Will Be Citywide in Its Scope.

DENOMINATIONS COOPERATE

Program Also Includes Normal Classes to Be Held on Each Sunday Evening.

A city wide missionary educational campaign will be conducted in Portland within the next month by the Portland Church federation, according to a decision made Friday evening at a meeting of the committee. Every church in the city will be involved. A school of missions in every church will conduct the work.

Every denomination enlisted in the Portland church federation and the Multnomah County Christian Endeavor are cooperating. The mission school will last for six weeks, beginning November 9. Each church will work its own plan for conducting the school, but normal classes will be held each Sunday evening about 8:30 o'clock. As separate classes have been provided for young people, the study work need not interfere with their regular program.

EMPHASIZE MEN'S CLASS WORK
Classes have been arranged for every age. Special emphasis is to be laid on the class provided for men. Preceding the school of missions a normal school will be held in the First Congregational school for six nights, beginning October 27. Seven persons from each church in the city will be expected to attend this training school.

Experts will train the leaders in conducting classes for primary children, juniors, young people, adults, men and women. Four of the normal school instructors have been selected. They are James F. Ewing, educational director of the First Presbyterian church; Ralph A. McAfee, executive secretary of the Portland Church federation; Rev. B. M. Pratt, pastor of Pilgrim Congregational church, and Mrs. J. E. Murphy of the Baptist headquarters office. Miss Esther Holloway of the Christian Endeavor union is cooperating. The church leaders trained in the normal school will be expected to return to their own churches to conduct the mission schools.

EWING DIRECTS CAMPAIGN
James F. Ewing, who is directing the work, said the churches already are lined up. Many pastors are merely waiting for the definite announcement. No effort will be made to secure advance registrations. The committee has arranged for the study books. These will be at the First Presbyterian church, 454 Alder street. Anyone desiring further information about the school should call Mr. Ewing at Broadway 5212 or Mr. McAfee at Main 5709.
