Listen to the call of the church bell tomorrow morning and hark back to the days when you were young and used to attend Sunday the Mount Tabor Presbyterian Sunday school regularly. Then put on your coat and hat and make for the church of your choice. Tomorrow is "Go to Sunday School" day.

By proclamation of Governor Ben Olcott the day will be observed in churches throughout the state. The plan is not to ask the church to give way to the Sunday school, but to get everyone to the regular Bible school service. All citizens of Oregon, adults as well as children, are urged to ob-"Go to Sunday School" day. Part of the governor's proclamation

"Since its inception the Sunday school has been the instrumentality in that degree of character development which has been one of the outstanding factors in the greatness of our nation. Thousands of men and women of our state owe to the lessons which they have gained in attendance at Sunday school the fine sense of citizenship which has sustained them in their later years, and look back to those lessons with a keen sense of grateful appreciation.

The rural survey instituted in Western Oregon by the interchurch world movement is proceeding with the accumulation of interesting results. The state supervisor, the Rev. John D. Rice, has been giving per sonal attention to the community The committee for that county conagricultural agent, who is serving as chairman; W. C. Galloway, the Rev.

In various localities churches of great historic and community interest have been studied closely. Data has also been gathered on the economic and social conditions in the various communities. Special attention is being paid to the lumber camps. When the survey is completed a map will be made showing the boundaries of each community and those of each parish in that community. The data will also be charted and tabulated, so that the exact condition of each church and the state of the community in which it is situated will be discernible at a glance. In a way, this survey of Benton county is serving as a typical one, whereby may be gleaned a general impression of the Evangelical churches their work and their strength in Oregon, also the extent to which they are serving a community and are related to the entire community life. A training school for leaders in the
