City to Establish Rules to Regulate Traffic on Bridges

Immediate steps will be taken by the city authorities to draft rules and regubridges. This announcement followed a conference held Friday afternoon between District Attorney Evans and City Attorney LaRoche. The latter is of the opinion that the city is not only possessed of the power to regulate loads passing over the bridge and speed of vehicles, but that the city is bound to exercise such power. Mayor Baker has instructed Police leutenant Lewis to compile such rules and regulations immediately as are sary for the proper control of traffic over the bridges.

SCARCITY OF CEDAR OPENS BIG MARKET FOR FIR SHINGLES

Mills of Oregon and Washington Experiment With Other Woods and Find Fir Acceptable.

Rapid cutting out of stands of cedar in the forests of Oregon and Washington has raised the price of cedar shingles to a point where Douglas fir becomes a successful competitor. The best of the cedar grew in the low lands, and when this was cut out and loggers were obliged to go farther back into the hills, not only did the cost of production increase but the quality of the timber showed a marked falling off, according to lumbermen engaged in shingle manufacture.
