MAN IS FINED FOR REFUSING TO AID IN FIRE FIGHTING

Judge Knowles of La Grande Imposes Penalty of $100 on T. Lawson for His Indifference.

SENTENCE LATER SUSPENDED

Fact That Defendant Had Already Served Two Months in Jail Is Factor in Granting Leniency.

The first case of the enforcement of the new forest fire laws, providing that able-bodied men must aid in fighting forest fires in their neighborhood when necessity arises, occurred last Monday when Judge Knowles of the district court at La Grande imposed a fine of $100 on Thomas Lawson. Sentence was suspended during the good behavior of Lawson and the fact that he had already served two months in jail pending his trial.

R. M. Evans, supervisor of the Whitman national forest, who is in Portland for a few days, related the incidents of the prosecution at the forest service this morning.

"We had a very serious fire situation," said Evans, "and a particularly bad fire near Cove, in Union county. My assistant, J. P. Irwin, called upon a threshing crew in the vicinity to help fight the fire. They all responded but Lawson, who hung around the threshing machine awaiting the return of the other men. Irwin telephoned to the house, but Lawson refused to come to the phone, saying the men could find him in the field if they wanted him. Irwin called on him, but Lawson said he would refuse to work for the government under any circumstances whatever."

"Irwin had Lawson arrested, and he was jailed until his trial came up."

"After Lawson's arrest," said Evans, "we had no more trouble getting men in the Grande Ronde valley to fight fires."

"We are having some real winter weather in Eastern Oregon," said Evans. "It was snowing in Baker and La Grande when I left Wednesday evening. October has been the coldest month in the history of the weather bureau in Baker, and is causing considerable worry among the stockmen because of the lack of fall pasture and the scarcity of high priced hay."

Long Creek Farmers Buy at Prairie City As Costs Are Lower

Baker, Nov. 1.—Rather than pay $2.50 a sack that is demanded for apples at home, Long Creek farmers are buying their supply from Prairie City, where the price is from $1 to $2. Prairie City is also supplying Long Creek with seed grain at 3 to 3 1/2 cents a pound, with potatoes at 2 1/2 cents, and with onions at 3 cents a pound. The temperature at Long Creek has been reported as low as zero, and last week saw the first snowfall of the season. The majority of the farmers are reported to have finished seeding, but, owing to scarcity of seed grain, a few must wait until spring, as it is considered that winter has begun. Long Creek weather prophets are predicting an easy winter despite the early cold and snow, basing their predictions upon the fact that deciduous trees have just begun to shed their leaves. The construction of sheep sheds and general preparation for winter have created a demand for lumber that it is predicted will continue until the roads become impassable to trucks in central Grant county.

WORK ON IRRIGATION DITCH TO BIG CREEK HALTED
Baker, Nov. 1.—Winter's approach has compelled the cessation of construction work on the irrigation ditch being built from the head of Catherine creek to the Big Creek farming community, according to George T. Cullen, contractor, who says that the labor has all been released and the camp dismantled. During the summer two miles of ditch was completed. The remaining two miles, with several storage reservoirs, will be completed next year. The project will serve a large tract of land in Baker and Union counties.

New Shingle Mill At Chehalis Now Is Being Operated

Chehalis, Wash., Nov. 1.—The new shingle mill built by Sam Osborne in Chehalis, started operations this week. It has a capacity of about 30,000 feet daily and has plenty of orders ahead.

Bridge Project Unopposed

Chehalis, Wash., Nov. 1.—At a public hearing in Toledo, called by Major J. F. Slatery of Portland, United States district engineer, no protests against the location of the big new bridge the state is building across the Cowlitz at Toledo, were filed. The Portland Iron Works company has charge of the work and is pouring concrete on the last pier.

Centralia Issues School Newspaper

Centralia, Wash., Nov. 1.—Thursday the first issue of the Napavine Enterprise, of which George Bright, superintendent of Napavine schools, is the editor, appeared. The paper is a four-page, four-column publication, containing community and school news. Bright announced that the paper was not established for profit.
