Good Bill Being Strotter Offered at Pantages

Musical Comedy Sketch Head- space he has vacated. lines Week's Program; Serial Continues.

THE musical comedy, "On the Golf Links," is the principal feature of the at Pantages this week. The playlet features Buster Edwards and Joe Stanley, two comedians of exceptional ability and power to please. A sextet of charming girls adds to the attractiveness of the act.

Camille Rejane ,woman cellist, plays American airs and popular melodies with unusual skill and wins favor by her charming personality. Camille is a French girl and puts plenty of pep into

The Kilkenny Four, consisting of one clever, sweet-voiced woman and three versatile men performers, present an act replete with catchy songs and humorous conversation. Their singing is especially Ross Wyse and his boy Tony, assisted by a charming bit of femininity, put on an acrobatic exhibition in which Tony furnishes the major portion of the entertainment by his wonderful contor-Tallman, Craig and company should be capable of better things, though their act is not lacking in merit. Attempts to win favor by the booze route are getting rather stale and indicate a poverty of wit on the part of the actors. The Cycling Brunettes are two clever performers on the bicycle and their turn, "Defying Gravity," is the first number on the program. The eleventh episode of "Smashing the Barriers," the Pantages film serial, is full of thrills.

University Class To Present Play

University of Oregon, Eugene, Nov. 19.- "The Little Dog Laughed," a fairy tale of Mother Goose rhymes, will be presented by the advance classes in dramatics Friday night at the Eugene theatre here. The play, written by Fergus Reddie, head of the dramatic de-partment of the university, is being directed by him personally. There will be about 40 in the cast. The play was presented about two years ago for the first time, the proceeds of the performance being donated to the Red Cross.

The young men gathered around her her, and it was love at first sight.
When John Melbourne, a parasitical husband living on his wife's wealth, loaned Prudence $200 which she had lost at poker, he forced her to meet him at a roadhouse by threatenenig to show the cancelled check to her stern old Quaker father in Pennsylvania.

But Prudence had armed herself with one of the 20 love letters that Melbourne had sent to a discarded mistress and when the supper was ready at the roadhouse she showed him the letter and said that the other 19 letters were with the hotel clerk under instructions to deliver them to Melbourne's wife unless Prudence was back by 12 o'clock. And Melbourne made such quick time back to the hotel with Prudence that she was able to see Grayson Mills and then all was well for the little grey dove.
