

PRESIDENT JENKS SOUNDS DEMAND FOR AMERICANISM

Head of National Society of Sons of American Revolution Comes for Three Days' Stay in City. PATRIOTIC SENTIMENT SEEN

Pioneer in Americanization Work Speaks to Meeting at University Club Saturday Night.

Sounding again the demand for education in strict Americanism, Chancellor L. Jenks, president general of the National Society of Sons of the American Revolution, arrived in Portland Thursday night to spend three days visiting Oregon members of the society and analyzing the work being carried on here.

An eminent lawyer in his own domain, President Jenks has been intensely active in the work of the society since his election last May and has been, as he expresses it, "on the wing" throughout that time, visiting the several state chapters.

ARRIVES FOR OFFICIAL VISIT
"My presence here is an official visit to the Oregon society, through which I hope to get in touch with the patriotic sentiment of the people of the state, as I have elsewhere. Everywhere I have been enthused by the latent patriotic Americanism I have found. The society is an index to the spirit of loyalty that is everywhere manifested."

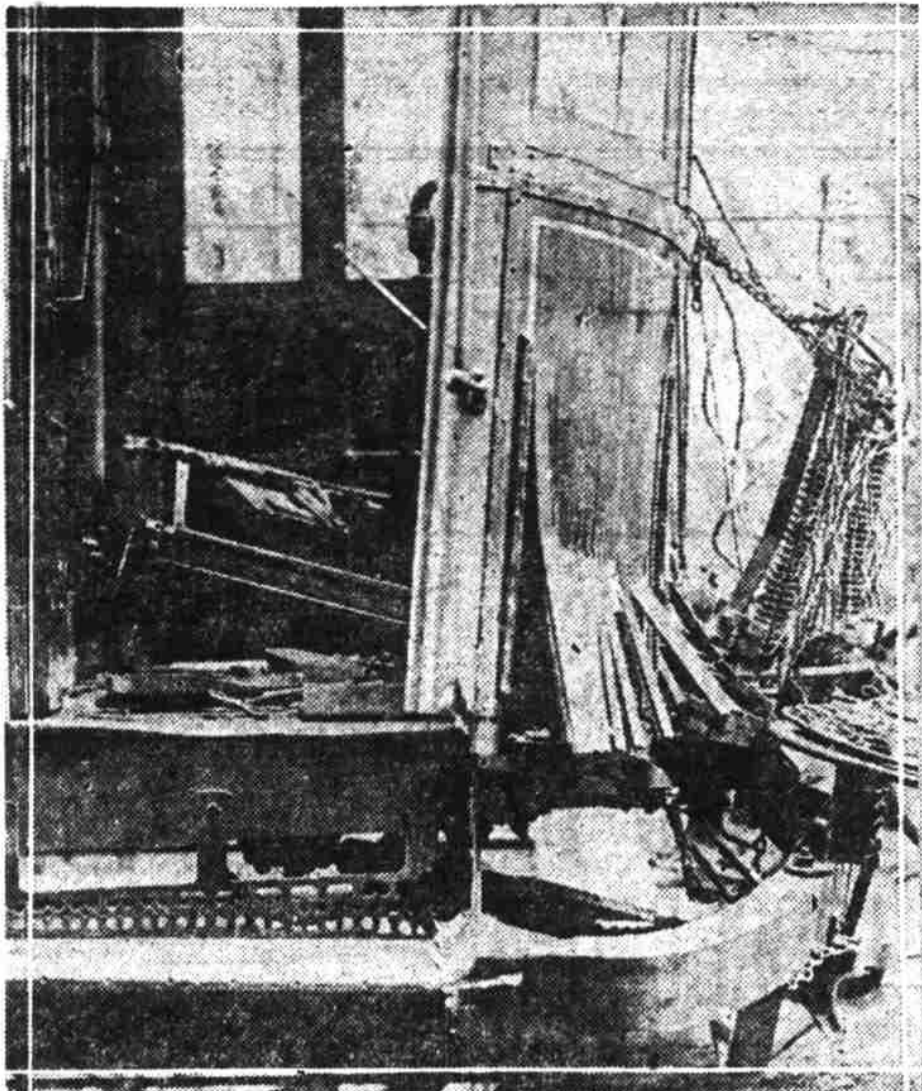

"Really, the Sons of the Revolution have no excuse for existence unless they apply themselves to some upbuilding effort and it is a happy fact that this application has centered upon educational work in Americanization. Our patriotic endeavor has been widespread and has brought results."

Jenks, his friends here declare, is a pioneer in the society's work of Americanization, for which the society is one of the original sponsors. Through his efforts along that line he is held to be working out the destiny of the organization along a broad and purposeful way.

GUEST AT ARLINGTON CLUB

Jenks is a guest at the Arlington club while in Portland. At noon today he lunched with friends there and this afternoon is touring the Columbia river highway with members of the society. On Saturday evening he will speak at a meeting of the University club and on Sunday evening will depart for California.

At the University club meeting Jenks will be introduced by Chief Justice Thomas A. McBride of the Oregon supreme court. A buffet luncheon will follow the address, permitting members and guests to meet the visitor informally.

BLUE RIBBONERS RECEIVE OVATION

through the pavilion, even though there is no special attraction. They just want to see the animals. The night horse show, both Wednesday and Thursday, packed the house.

The Oregon Wool Growers' association today will end its two day convention at the Livestock building, North Portland. While not connected directly with the exposition, the wool growers set their convention dates so as to be close in attendance at the pavilion.

MONEY IS SUBSCRIBED

Three hundred Pacific Northwest stockmen and bankers subscribed $12,000 Thursday night toward the $35,000 deficit of the stock show.

Representing Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and California, visiting stockmen met with Oregon bankers at a banquet at the Chamber of Commerce. The dinner closed officially Stockmen's and Bankers' at the exposition, but the diners jumped into motor cars and traveled to North Portland to attend the night horse show as a feature of their entertainment here.

WEST SHOWS BEST STOCK

"The East must soon come to the West to show its fine animals," W. L. Thompson, former Pendleton banker, now of Portland, declared. "No longer do we need to send our farmers to Wisconsin to buy pure stock. We've got stock as fine out here as in Portland."

"These shows are made not for competition but for cooperation," Frank Thompson, field representative of the American Shorthorn Breeders' association, declared.

Edward Parsons of Seattle, through Frank Brown, subscribed $2500 to the exposition company. Parsons was not present, Brown declared, but was impressed with the pavilion when he visited it Thursday, that he volunteered financial assistance.

Frank Rothrock of Spokane gave $1000. Fred Stinson of Seattle donated $1500. Other $1000 subscriptions came from O. M. Plummer, manager of the exposition; Swift & Co., Frank Brown and Polk county.

FARMERS OPPOSE COUP FOR LABOR PARTY CANDIDATE

Conference Opened With Declaration to Squelch Any Attempt to Stampede Meeting.

DEMANDS ARE ANNOUNCED

"We Want Public Ownership of Natural Resources," Says Secretary March, in His Address.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—(I. N. S.)—A sharp fight to prevent John Fitzpatrick and other Chicago labor leaders from stampeding the Farmers' National council into a new political party back of a labor candidate for president of the United States in 1920 developed at the opening meeting here today of the joint conference between the farmers' and various producers' and consumers' cooperative associations.

Fifteen hundred delegates are attending the conference.

Secretary Benjamin C. March of the farmers' organization, in his opening address declared that "any attempt to capture the 3,000,000 farmers' votes represented at this meeting will be trampled down effectively."

"We will refuse to endorse a separate political party," March said. "Instead, we are going to compel one of the old political parties to give us our demands."

"We want public ownership of natural resources and natural monopolies and we will devise ways and means of putting into effect such a legislative program."

March declared that the "heaviest grum of the organization are going to be turned on the high cost of living."

Resolutions urging the passage of the Kenyon-Anderson bill to cite the packers and "clear the way for free marketing" and urging extension of federal control over railroads for two years more, will be presented to the conference.

GOVERNMENT NEAR END OF ITS PATIENCE

some 450,000 men and three years' time to set Mexico's house in order.

Intervention at this time would mean "taking this big step," as one important personage put it. No such "punitive expedition" as General Pershing led against the Villa bandits is contemplated, it is understood, but real intervention, in every sense of the word, with the pacification of Mexico as its object.

TROUBLE IS OLD ONE

While the immediate cause of this step—should it become necessary—might be attributed to the treatment of Consul Agent Jenkins, the reason lies much deeper than that.

For years the American government has been subjected to annoyances—some petty, some much more consequential—on the part of Mexico.

Despite numerous warnings these actions have been kept up. Bandits have repeatedly raided American territory. American citizens have been robbed and murdered, two American army officers were captured and held for ransom and released only upon payment by the United States government of that ransom—or part of it, the rescuing party getting off after turning over half what had been demanded.

The last case prior to the Jenkins affair was the murder by Mexicans of two American army aviators in Lower California after they had lost their way while on patrol and forced to come down.

OUTRAGES MUST CEASE

The case of Consul Agent Jenkins is only the last of a long series of what have been considered outrages against American citizens if not open insults to the American flag.

Apparently the United States has come to the end of its patience. The United States has peremptorily demanded Jenkins' immediate release in what is considered one of the most aggressive notes ever sent to Carranza. A reply was expected today or tomorrow.

The note of yesterday stated that the department is in possession of information showing that the arrest of Jenkins was absolutely arbitrary and unwarranted.

This was interpreted as showing that the state department now is convinced that the charge against Jenkins of collusion with the bandits who captured and held him for $150,000 ransom, are baseless.

AMERICAN NOTE CREATES SOME STIR IN MEXICO

By Ralph Turner

Mexico City, Nov. 20.—(U. P.)—News that the American state department had sent the Mexican government a note declaring further detention of William O. Jenkins, United States consular agent at Puebla, would "seriously affect relations between the United States and Mexico," created a stir in limited circles tonight.

Dispatch of the note had not yet become generally known.

A dispatch from Puebla stated that Jenkins, whose second arrest on a charge of collusion in connection with the recent kidnaping took place after he had been released from detention on similar charges, still was in custody. It was said the judge at Puebla had not considered his case because today was a holiday.

Second Secretary Hanna of the American embassy interviewed the state governor and later visited Jenkins in jail.

A rumor was in circulation tonight that Curdova, the rebel leader in the Puebla district, had admitted abduction of Jenkins and had confessed he had tried to kidnap the British consul at the same time.

ment as United States attorney, to succeed Bert E. Haney, resigned, has just been confirmed.

Lusk this morning had made no decision as to the offer, he advised Humphreys. Watkins, who has been assistant to Haney for several months, will retire to private practice over the protest of the new district attorney. Lusk is a member of the local law firm of Mallory & Gearin.

Humphreys will take his new office as soon as he is instructed from Washington to do so, he said today, and will make no change in the staff aside from those made necessary by the voluntary resignation of assistants.
