

CLACKAMAS WILL VOTE ON HIGHWAY BONDS MONDAY

Special Election Will Decide Whether County Will Spend $1,700,000 for Hard Roads. FEATURE IS ANTAGONIZED

Supporters Say Opponents Are People of Communities Where Roads Already Are Paved.

A special election will be held in Clackamas county Monday for the purpose of voting on a county bond issue for $1,700,000 for road improvement.

A feature which distinguished the proposed bond issue from issues of other counties is that the money is to be expended only on hard surface. The roadbed must be graded and made ready for the pavement by the district before the money is made available out of the bond issue to the district.

It is around this feature that the chief opposition to the bonds is based. It is asserted that it will require of some districts a burden they cannot bear.

It is also charged by opponents of the measure that it is being backed by the paving interests. On the other hand, the advocates of the bond issue charge that the opposition comes principally from those districts which already have hard surfaced roads and are unwilling to contribute anything to other districts not so well favored as they have been.

There is developing now a strong sentiment against the bonds on the part of Oregon City voters for the reason that Oregon City is already bonded heavily, commented Harvey G. Starkweather, one of the leaders of the opposition.

My record will show that I have always been a good roads advocate, but the present proposal is one I cannot endorse. By the provisions of the measure, if enacted, hardship will be wrought in many districts, particularly in those which have already established good roads, and which will not share in the benefits of the issue, though subject to the heavy additional levy.

Mayor Initiates Plan to Revive Death Penalty

Friday Night's Fatal Holdup Stirs Mayor to Action, and Draft of Amendment Is Ordered.

1920 ELECTION TO DECIDE Measure Will Come Before People in Form of Initiative; Many Petitions to Be Sent Out.

Mayor Baker instructed City Attorney LaRoche Saturday to prepare immediately an amendment to the state constitution which, if passed, would reinstate capital punishment in Oregon.

LaRoche will prepare all necessary documents and petitions that the people, by the signatures of 8 per cent of the voters, may utilize the initiative and place the matter on the ballot at the general election in November, 1920.

Petitions will be sent to all posts of the American Legion over the state, to clubs and other organizations. Mayor Baker asserts that he will do all in his power to see that the amendment is placed before the people.

"The cold-blooded murder in the Claremont tavern Friday night was the last straw in lawlessness," declared the mayor. "Two of our responsible citizens were shot down—it was appalling. That boasting fiend Johnson, who murdered Mrs. Freeman, and the Centralia outrage have stirred my blood to the boiling point. I'm sure the people of Oregon will back this movement to bring murderers to time. Someone has to start the wheels moving to restore capital punishment. I'm willing."

"Let's make Oregon too hot for murderers," continued the mayor. "This is no time for sympathy for them—we must use every weapon of the law to bring them to their knees. Capital punishment is necessary—I'm convinced of that."
