that the irrigation district should pay $90,000 for the land and in addition bear expenses of the suit.

More than $2000 is asked as fees for the 28 witnesses who appeared for the livestock company. Total costs are $7872.80, Treadwell says.

The irrigation district objects to payment of $324.40, because that much was given witnesses as fees for time not consumed in the trial, according to Thomas G. Greene, attorney. He filed an objection to bill of costs.
