

OLD SOL IS ON JOB AGAIN, AND COLD DECREASES

Forecast Indicates Warmer Weather in Sight; Lowest This Morning, 28 Above.

The minimum temperature today was the same as Wednesday morning, 28 degrees above zero being registered about 6 o'clock on the weather bureau's thermometer at the customs house.

Another day of full sunshine with possibly warmer weather and the same for Friday were promised by E. L. Wells, district forecaster, who, in his conservative fashion says that "it will be fair and not so cold." Winds will continue to be easterly.

The highest wind of the 24 hours occurred at 9 o'clock Wednesday night, when a velocity of 12 miles out of the east was registered. The cold weather east of the mountains is moderating, Wells said, and a storm on the California coast may bring rain to Southern Oregon coast points.

At Roseburg the lowest registered was 28 degrees above, this morning. The lowest at Baker, was 2 above, Spokane 4 above, North Yakima 4 above, and Walla Walla 12 above.

The river fell .7 of a foot in the 24 hours and registered 3.6 feet above zero at 8 a. m. The river forecast is for it to continue to fall.

Zero Weather at Baker
Baker, Dec. 4.—This was Baker's coldest day since last winter, according to the local weather observer, who reports zero at 6 o'clock this morning. The December minimum record in Baker is 12 degrees below zero. A heavy frost whitened telephone and power wires, cutting out telephone service between Baker and La Grande. Communication with Portland, via Walla Walla, is confined to one wire.
