Grief for things past that cannot be remedied and sorrow for things to come that cannot be prevented, may really hurt, and can never benefit me.—Bishop Hall.

WHICH TESTIMONY?

It was in France from May, 1918, to March, 1919, and my brother who was with me, was killed. I favor a remedy that will settle disputes other than by war.

On the day that Senator Reed of Missouri denounced the peace treaty before the Portland Chamber of Commerce, the above words in a note accompanying a vote for the treaty came to The Journal from a Portland service man.

Those who count their dead in the late war are not thirsting for the next war. They and those who feel for them are voting for the treaty. The treaty may not be all they desire, but it is the best that could be had, and it is effort to save the young men from another Argonne or another Chateau-Thierry.

Which testimony is the best—that of the fighter who was there and saw the bloody tragedy, or the senator who sat in a swivel chair, and voted most of the time in congress for measures to please his pro-German constituency?

A black snake, 5 feet 2 inches long, approached the baby carriage in which an infant slept on a lawn at Galena, Kan. The infant's pet, a cat, attacked the snake and a battle royal ensued in which the carriage was overturned and the child thrown out.

OREGON BOOKS FOR OREGON IT IS claimed that not an Oregon-made text-book is required in our public schools.

eries are equal to the task, and the people have adopted the slogan, "Oregon-made Goods for Oregon."

Shall the schools be the exception to this slogan, or shall the slogan be taught and practiced in our schools? There is Oregon literature and sketches of Oregon life and history that an Oregon series of readers, for instance, would ingratiate into the lives of Oregon school pupils.

More is needed from the clubs and societies and associations than their good will, if the accident-prevention campaign is to get results. The Journal is printing columns and columns of matter showing causes of accidents, showing the faults of pedestrians, showing the blunders and excesses of drivers, showing how the courts conflict with each other, showing the peril of faulty brakes, showing every phase of the traffic situation—all of it educational in character, but of little value unless the information supplied be made use of.

THE Port of Portland commission has executed the duty given it by the public in the employment of a traffic director. It has secured a man who will be expected to attend vigorously to the community phases of trade extension. It has joined with the commission of public doc in enlisting the services of a port engineer and in the preliminary formulation of a plan for a harbor plant that will serve all the needs of shipping.

Some years ago a "port loyalty roll call" was proposed. Business men were to be recorded in respect to their several degrees of willingness to use the port. "Stand up and be counted" was the exhortation. It was disclosed through the federal customs house that a startlingly small number of importers of goods for Portland and its trade area were clearing through this port, or even having shipments that came to other ports sent here in bond.

RIGHTS OF UNEMPLOYED A S MIGHT have been expected the Wall Street Journal frowns in ponderous wrath at the quotation credited to David Lloyd George by James Henry Thomas, British labor leader, that it is the state's duty to find work or "to provide subsistence" for the unemployed.

CENTRAL OREGON loses one of its foremost men in the passing of John Bernard Daly. He was a man of great energy and initiative under ordinary circumstances to find or make opportunity for employment.

A NEW SOUL HERE is a case of the new spirit of democracy. Employees of the Chicago Automobile club were guests of New Year's eve by the club members in recognition of their faithful service during the year.

hats and coats were checked by the vice president of the club. Playing their role faithfully, the employees gave 5 cent tips to the big ones who were temporarily serving them. The, also made the bell boys carry suit cases filled with bricks to the top floor, for which service, nickel tips were tendered.

A dinner was given to poor men's horses by the Horse Aid society in New York on New Year's day. Four hundred horses, owned by poor men who were able to afford not more than one equine, were fed heavily on a dinner of oats, bran and alfalfa mixed, topped off with a third of a bale of hay for each.

Slavery Question Vexed Oregon Same as Other States Legislation Enacted to Bar Free as Well as Enslaved Negroes For many years prior to the Civil war the question of slavery and the color line constantly cropped up in Oregon's legislation.

Can't Understand U. S. Senate The Journal—In a letter from Nathaniel Medofsky, connected with the consular service in Bern, Switzerland, is reflected the sentiment which in Europe holds this country as regards the peace treaty.

Denounces All Pro-Germans Corvallis, Dec. 31.—To the Editor of The Journal—I read your interesting editorial last night entitled "The Case of Berger." You ask some important questions. May I venture an answer to some of them?
