Rivoli Premier Is Event of Interest

FOR hours last evening the new Rivoli theatre was a bright island in a sea of people, the occasion being the opening of the house under the regime of Mischa Guterson and his associates, with Marshall Taylor as house manager. Crowds besieged the theatre long before the hour set for the opening, and invited guests having been seated, the theatre was filled for the initial performance and the crowd that waited patiently to see and hear the new show was taken care of at later performances. Though interest centered largely in the appearance of M. Guterson and his orchestra, to be featured regularly at the Rivoli, there were additional thrills anticipated and realized because the feature film offering for the premier is an entirely Portland and Oregon production, "The Golden Trail."

MISS MARGARET FALLENUS, formerly well known in Portland music circles, who is featured at the Hippodrome this weekend in a beautiful number.

Alcazar Must Have More Support

By S. E. Jr. KIND words and good wishes don't fill the front of the house nor buy meek tickets for actors and actresses nor stage hand and other help—who, just like the rest of us, are crowding the cashier's window when pay-day comes around. Manager C. V. Everett of the Alcazar appreciates the good spirit and the promises of Portland citizens and civic organizations, that prompted him to decide to keep the Alcazar Musical Players in Portland, after it had been decided to let the company go because of lack of patronage, but it will be necessary that Portland people make good of their promises if the players are actually to remain here. The Alcazar opened again last Monday night to just about the same old first night crowd, and attendance during the week has not been what the enthusiastic promises of those who took it upon themselves to assure the company better patronage, would lead one to believe might be expected. It may be that the fact that the offering, "Flora Bella," was a "repeater," had something to do with it. After Manager Everett's decision to close he couldn't get a new show in time for preparation for reopening, so did the best he could, and he promises to keep up the standard of the productions as they have been in the past—providing the support promised him is forthcoming. "Otherwise," says Manager Everett, "the house must be closed. I have given the production a fair trial, and am willing to try again in view of the seeming alarm and disappointment expressed when we announced a 'Finis,' but I cannot afford to lose any more money. Portland, through individuals and organizations, has expressed itself as proud of the Alcazar company as a civic asset. Now Portland must 'come through' with patronage or we must 'pass out.'"

AT THE HOTELS

E. W. Ray, the well known alfalfa grower of Echo, Or., is beginning to feel a little suspicious of the number "13." When the Fulmar was scheduled this morning instead of yesterday as he expected to, he recounted the reasons for his delay, which he attributed to the fact that his berth in the Fulmar was "upper 13." Leaving Echo Thursday night, Ray expected to wake up next morning in The Dalles. He found himself, however, with the crack of dawn, roused from his slumbers in Pendleton. On account of washouts the train was switched from the main line and made a tiresome detour by way of Walla Walla. The train next hit a rock and reduced the cowcatcher to scrap iron, while the nervous passenger occupying "upper 13" felt himself entirely to blame for the sudden jolt which brought the train to a precipitous pause. Ray is on his way to visit his children, who are attending college at Corvallis. C. Everett Smith, an art collector and connoisseur, arrived at the Benson this morning from Los Angeles. Smith has made frequent visits to Portland, where he is well known among collectors of the city. He is to have a private exhibit while here of some wonderful old book bindings, manuscripts, etchings, engravings and autographed letters. Although Smith's headquarters are now in Los Angeles, he is apt to be found at most any place in the United States, and for 20 years his studio was in the Wall Street building, New York. Horton Whipple is registered at the Multnomah from Tulsa, Oklahoma. Incidentally, Tulsa is that live wire town which is going to send 400 Shriners to Portland next June for the convention and the money to cover railroad fare and all expenses for those 400 is now on deposit in a Tulsa bank. A party of four from Canyon City are booked at the New Perkins. They are Judge Everett Hicks, E. G. Gurney, P. W. Roberts and H. G. Lyon. Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Watts of Athena, Or., are guests at the Multnomah. Milling company at Athena. Carl Wodeke of Bend, who is registered at the Imperial, is a dealer in book bindings and is understood. While in Yakima, Wodeke says, a newspaper gave him credit for being a representative of the Pacific Coast Packers, and he had a few moments of warmth around the collar when another fellow came up and asked him if Wodeke had his job. J. W. Dudley and wife, who are guests at the Imperial, returned from the beautiful Silver Lake district, Cowitz county, Washington. A. W. Stone of Hood River is at the Portland. D. W. Campbell, formerly superintendent of the Southern Pacific lines in Oregon, well known and well liked in Portland, is registered at the Imperial. Campbell resides at present in Los Angeles. Edward P. Scallon of Crosby, Minn., and F. A. Beaver of Duluth, who are interested in the Pacific coast lumber industry, are guests at the Multnomah. J. H. Haner, a Bend real estate dealer, is a guest at the Benson. Judge Henry D. Keyes of Fossil, Or., is judging at the Oregon during a short visit in Portland. J. N. Williamson, who is a guest at the Multnomah, is a stockman from Trinitieville. T. A. McCann of Bend, connected with the Hicks-Shevell Lumber company, is registered at the Portland. E. Nelson, general manager of the Lewis and Clarke railroad and a resident of Astoria, is a guest at the Oregon. Alexander Black and Movies "Alexander Black, granddaddy of the movies, takes movies of his own grandchildren now." This is the legend that is going to be flashed on the screen clear across the country soon, when "movies" of the author of "The Great Desire" will be released at the Paramount "Screen Magazine." Black treated the country to its first photoplays 25 years ago, before the days of the movies. He flashed a series of pictures so arranged as to merge into each other and form a story, while he stood by and read the lines for each character. Since then Black has taken joy in recording the history of his grandchildren with a "movie" camera. With this news from the "movie" peoples comes the announcement that Black's "The Great Desire," a Harper and Row picture, is being large printing.

WITH AUTHOR AND PUBLISHER

The great feminine problem, what to wear, is solved in a book fresh from the press, entitled "Garments for Girls," because it gives definite and minute instructions for the making of every garment worn by the modern maid, from dainty French lingerie to the sturdy, serviceable, but democratic garment known as the middie blouse. The work is prepared by an associate professor of home economics at the University of Wisconsin—Celestina Leonline Schmitz, who knows all about yokes, tucks, hems, feather stitching, scallops, gores, biases, plaquettes, ruffles, felling, shirring, selvages, eyelets, plepums and other mysteries of dress. She imparts this knowledge freely and skillfully for the benefit of harassed women, and lightens the labor of "spring sewing" if this book is consulted at the public library.
