BUCKLEY GOES TO ORIENT FOR PORT ON TRADE MISSION

California Man Named by Portland Commission to Represent City as Shipping Agent.

The Port of Portland commission at its meeting this afternoon, named J. F. Buckley of Oakland, Cal., to represent the commission and the city of Portland generally on a trade mission to the Orient.

Buckley will go as a general shipping agent, informing business men of the Far East of the facilities of the port and of the import and export possibilities.

Appointment was made as a result of the strongest recommendations by President Max H. Houser of the commission. It was Houser who announced at the meeting 10 days ago that a commercial agent to represent Portland in the Far East was absolutely necessary. Houser said that he would himself hire such an agent if the port commission or some other public body did not take action within 30 days.

The salary will be $5000 a year and an additional $7500 is provided for the expenses necessary in carrying on the campaign of education in the Orient.

Buckley is widely acquainted with trade conditions in the Far East as he traveled extensively in China, Japan, Singapore and through the Dutch East Indies.

Buckley is one of the few white men to master any of the Chinese dialects, speaking Hok Quan Chinese, that used by the merchants generally in the trade in the East Indies. He also speaks Spanish, French and Malay.

EGERIA HAS HEAVY CARGO

Barge Starts to Unload Federal Surplus Supplies.

Work of unloading the barge Egeria at St. Johns concentration yard of the supplies owned by the Emergency Fleet corporation after completion of the shipbuilding program was started this afternoon.

These supplies were loaded from the government controlled yards at Astoria, but hardly a dent was made in the pile, according to officials of the supply and sales division, so huge is the accumulation. The materials on board the Egeria, which is loaded down to her marks and with the decks piled high, comprise all manner of shipbuilding material.

It is expected that at least a week will be consumed in the unloading, after which the barge will be towed to the Coast Shipbuilding company yard, in South Portland, for completion as an offshore lumber schooner. The Egeria has been purchased by a syndicate of Portland men, headed by H. E. Pennell.

Other barges are to be sent to Astoria in a few days to pick up additional material for the St. Johns yard.

SALES MANAGER RETURNS

Yoakum of Fleet Corporation Back; New Plans Due.

With the return to the coast of C. O. Yoakum, general manager of the western district, supply and sales division, Emergency Fleet corporation, important announcements in regard to plans for selling surplus material left after the completion of the government program in the Northwest are expected in a few days.

Yoakum is expected in San Francisco Thursday, and Jay S. Hamilton, assistant in charge of sales, and J. W. Wood, assistant in charge of the material section, will leave tonight to meet him. The three officials will meet with California officials for a few days, then return to Portland and later go to Puget Sound for a like conference.

The Foundation company paid approximately $50,000 for 5200 pieces of piling stored at San Francisco, in a sale completed Tuesday by the sales and supply division. The material is to be used in construction of a pier in San Francisco harbor for the Standard Oil company.

LOADS FOOD FOR INDIANS

Algonquin to Supply Shortage of Provisions at Alaska Canneries.

Astoria, Jan. 21.—The coast guard cutter Algonquin left Tuesday morning for Seattle, where she will take on provisions for Indians at various fishing canneries in Alaska, who are said to be short of supplies. She will remain in Alaskan waters during the fishing season, acting as patrol. No other vessel is to replace her here.

The Algonquin was assigned to the mouth of the Columbia river last September. The vessel was formerly in the coast guard service at various points along the Atlantic coast, and served in the navy as a convoy vessel between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom during the war. Captain Walter A. Wiley and his crew paid a visit in Portland with the Algonquin in November.

CITY OF TOPEKA IN DRYDOCK

Steamer's Next Trip to Be Direct to San Francisco.

The steamer City of Topeka of the Portland-San Francisco passenger service of the Admiral line, will leave Seattle, where it is now undergoing repairs on the Todd drydock, January 24, taking a general cargo but no passengers direct to San Francisco. Announcement of this was made today by E. G. McMicken, general passenger agent for the Pacific Steamship company, who is in Portland today.

The Topeka will resume its customary sailings from San Francisco on January 30 and will leave Portland again for the South on February 3.

BOILERS WILL GO SOUTH

Steamer Poulsen Scheduled to Leave With Three Boilers Today.

The steamer Johan Poulsen was expected to leave down from the Willamette Iron & Steel Works today with three marine boilers for shipbuilding plants at San Francisco. The Poulsen came up from Westport, Tuesday night, where a portion of its lumber cargo was taken aboard, and will return to Westport to complete before starting south.

This makes six boilers loaded at the Willamette Iron Works this week, three being taken out Tuesday afternoon for Seattle by the steamer F. S. Loop. They will be delivered to the Tood Drydock & Shipbuilding company.

ALL ALONG THE WATERFRONT

Frank O'Conner, resident manager of the Pacific Steamship company, was advised this morning by wireless that the shipping board freighter Aniwa, coming to Portland from Honolulu to load flour for the Atlantic, was 300 miles off the mouth of the Columbia at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. The vessel is expected in the river Thursday morning.

The wooden steamer Owatama will complete bunkering at the Fifteenth street terminal today, and will leave down for St. Helens Thursday to take cargo at the lie booms. The Owatama will go to the United Kingdom under operation and management of the Pacific Steamship company. The vessel was recently completed at Astoria.

The shipping board tanker Imlay, with its cargo of creosote oil from Amsterdam, was at the plant of the St. Helens Creosote company this morning, discharging. A large portion of the Imlay's cargo, which came from Europe, was left at points on the Sound. After finishing at St. Helens, the vessel will proceed to San Francisco and probably take grain to Europe.

The lighthouse tender Manzanita is replacing the important No. 6 nun buoy in the channel at the mouth of the Columbia river with a new gas and whistling buoy, according to an announcement by Superintendent Robert Warrack of the seventeenth lighthouse district today.

Representatives of the United States steamboat inspection service were aboard the steamer Pawlet at the Standard yards in Vancouver this morning, conducting the hydrostatic tests. The Pawlet was launched Tuesday morning.

The motorship Oronite was reported en route from San Francisco for the Columbia river today. The Oronite will load lumber at Westport for Sydney, Australia, on orders furnished by the Douglas Fir Exploitation & Export company. The vessel is charted by A. F. Thane & Co., San Francisco.

Completing its cargo at the North Bank dock, the United States army transport Marica was shifted to the Portland flouring mills at 8:15 this morning to finish. It is expected that the transport will be ready to get away by Sunday.

All beacons in the Columbia river which were carried away by the ice in December have now been replaced except one, according to Robert Warrack, superintendent of the seventeenth lighthouse district. This is the gauge pile beacon in Astoria harbor.

West Cayote Arrives February 7

Arrival of the steamer West Cayote of the European-Pacific line in Portland harbor to load cargo for the United Kingdom and the continent, will not be until February 7, the Columbia-Pacific Shipping company announced today. The vessel has not yet reached Seattle and will not be able to load and leave there by January 30, the date first announced.
