Oregon Pioneer Knew Lincoln Hanks Settled in Oregon

Quest for further information about the boyhood of Abraham Lincoln led Arthur E. Morgan from the mountain fastnesses of Arkansas to Douglas county, Oregon, and the results of a painstaking study are set forth in an article in the current number of the Atlantic Monthly.

The Oregonian referred to in the article is John Hanks, who, with his brother, Lewis Hanks, both cousins of Lincoln, lived near Riddle, Douglas county, in his article Morgan has little to say about them.
