

WITNESS UPHOLDS SALE OF SALMON

Major Murphy, Who Signed Contract, Is Quizzed by House Investigating Committee.

Washington, Feb. 27.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—With Major P. T. Murphy of the army quartermaster corps on the stand, the army salmon investigation Thursday before the house subcommittee became a fencing contest between the witness and Congressman Reavis, subcommittee chairman, concerning the merits of the repurchase contract between the government and packers, under which salmon was held six months after July 1 at government expense while packers were selling it back to the public.

Major Murphy signed this repurchase contract, which forms the center of the controversy, but explained he did so under orders of Quartermaster General Rogers. Responsibility for the contract, he said, rested with Major General Burr, who testified yesterday, and Assistant Secretary of War Crowell, who first approved it.

Murphy agreed with General Burr that the contract, when signed last June, was a good one for the government because quick decision had to be made to protect the public from indiscriminate sale of salmon and at the same time to get the goods back into trade channels. Allowances for freight charges, free storage and reconsigning made to packers were defended by Murphy, as in fact reciprocal, because packers incurred expense in holding salmon for the government when it was commandeered.

All salmon condemned by the bureau of chemistry was returned to canneries, said Murphy, practically all of it going back to Seattle for final destruction or reconsigning, while good salmon was sent anywhere the packers ordered.

Several clashes occurred between Chairman Reavis and Representative Donovan, Democratic member of the subcommittee, not unlike those between Frear and Lea in the spruce production inquiry, only less intense, as Reavis does not go to the same lengths as Frear.

2 Suspects Held on Syndicalism Charge

Aberdeen, Wash., Feb. 27.—A charge of criminal syndicalism has been filed against Herbert Fishell, arrested here last Saturday on suspicion of having been implicated in the Centralia Armistice day killings. A similar charge has been filed against T. H. Riley by the authorities of Lewis county. The two men are partners, and left this section of the state a few days before the Centralia murders took place. I. W. W. membership and report blanks, made out to T. H. Bradley, were found in Riley's possession. The authorities for a time conducted a search for Bradley, but are now convinced that Riley had been using the name as an alias for his I. W. W. activities.

Pioneer Physician Dies at Marshfield

Marshfield, Feb. 27.—Dr. C. W. Tower, pioneer of Coos Bay since 1888, died at his home here Thursday, at the age of 78 years. He was one of the early day physicians of Southwestern Oregon and for years was chairman of the county Republican central committee. He leaves two sons, J. B. and L. R. Tower.
