

JESUS' TEACHINGS PASTOR'S SOLUTION FOR LABOR UNREST

Jesus Christ and his teachings alone can adjust distress and unrest. The Rev. Bruce Richard Baxter, visiting clergyman, today told 350 Oregon pastors who are meeting at White Temple in a three-day conference to consider problems of the interchurch world movement.

The existing industrial system is based upon competition for private profit. Baxter said. "Increasing numbers of intelligent and conscientious people believe that injustices of such a system, with resultant distress and unrest, may be cured by applying the principles laid down by Jesus, the Christ of Nazareth."

The industrial relations committee of the interchurch world movement, he said, will make a survey to test the workability of its suggestions for curbing industrial unrest.

Dr. I. N. McCash, president of Phillips University, Oklahoma, and president of the national board of education of the Disciples of Christ, addressed the conference on church schools.

The ruling sentiment in America is for education. McCash declared, expressing the belief that state universities and the public school system need more religion.

The founders of our country divorced state and church, but they did not mean to divorce state and religion, said McCash.

Frank C. English, who spoke this morning before a conference of women church workers who are meeting at the First Presbyterian church, later spoke before the pastors' conference on "Ministerial Relief." He asserted that ministers should earn at least as much as a college professor, declaring a period of training and the usefulness of service are equal.

The average pension of the retired ministers of six great denominations is less than $600 a year, English said. "The average pension of six great corporations is about $1100."

Residences Robbed And Hotel Rooms Visited by Thieves

By using a jimmy bar on the pantry window, burglars gained entrance to the G. Commons house at 558 Alder street Wednesday and stole all the family silverware, a man's suit, overcoat, pair of shoes, several shirts, a gold bracelet and a revolver.
