

WIFE ONLY WOMAN A PERSIAN SEES, DECLARES SOHRAB

Mirza Ahmad Sohrab of Persia told the Progressive Business Men's club Thursday afternoon of Jerusalem's deliverance from Mohammedanism. Sohrab is a member of the Persian commission of education and is studying American social conditions. He vividly depicted the entrance to the Holy City effected by the British without firing a shot. "They came in singing 'Onward Christian Soldiers,'" related the Persian.

Walter Jenkins and Miss Kathleen Cockburn, with other representatives of the Portland Community Service association, invited the club's support of the recreational program which the association has inaugurated in the city. President Burntrager presented Howard Everts Weed as chairman of the day.

"Persian Goulash," concocted for Reed college students Thursday evening by Sohrab, proved a delectable dish. He chose as his theme the social status of women in Persia, past and present, and termed his random remarks "Goulash."

"Woman is the eternal question in Persia, as here," declared Sohrab. "She has been compared to the rainbow, for she is many-colored and an illusion. In Persia the woman is confined to her home both day and night. In America she is never home. The Persian man is never allowed to look into the face of a girl, and, of course, he never knows what he is missing. Divorce is a rare occurrence, for the Persian husband sees no woman but his wife, and therefore can make no comparisons."

Reforms in Persian marriage ideals have followed the high cost of living, according to the speaker. In the old days Persian kings had as many as 800 wives; but today, with the high cost of living a very bothersome factor, the present king is not even married. Many Persians are today finding the one wife they have one too many.

Alvarez, a wealthy rancher and Mexican by birth, returned to his ranch home after a drunken orgy Thursday. Smith for many years has been a prominent figure at book auctions and was noted for the high prices he paid for rare editions.

Dry Law Should Be Modified Cardinal Gibbons Declares

New Orleans, March 5.—(I. N. S.)—Congress holds the key to the prohibition problem in the United States and possesses the power to ally present discontent arising from its enforcement, Cardinal Gibbons said, in an interview.

"If congress were to place a liberal interpretation upon the question of what constitutes an intoxicating beverage, such as would permit the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines and yet maintain the spirit of the prohibition amendment, much would be accomplished towards solving a problem now becoming acute and destined to become more and more a basis for unrest in America," said Cardinal Gibbons.

"In speaking of the duty of foreigners who come to live in America, Cardinal Gibbons asserted that 'they must not come as dictators but as future citizens.' Discussing spiritualism, Cardinal Gibbons said: 'I have never heard of any individual benefited by spiritualism. It is a dangerous subject to be tampered with.'"

McArthur Tells Why He Opposes Repeal Of Prohibition Act

Washington, March 5.—(WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE JOURNAL)—Representative McArthur, who opposed the Volstead prohibition act, voted with other Oregon members Thursday against proposed rider to a legislative bill to repeal that act.

"I am against prohibition and against the Volstead law," he said in explanation, "but if this rider were enacted it would do away with all enforcement machinery and turn the country over to bootleggers. So I voted against a repeal. 'Volstead law is too drastic, and I will support a measure of more reasonable terms, but I am not willing to vote to leave the country without any means for enforcement of its laws.'"
